INDIAN STRANGLEHOLD FEARED Fish Rights Give-Away Must Stop: Sport Fed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation Bill Otway said the 25,000-member organization has launched a national campaign calling on Canadians to demand that the federal government stop "giving away" exclusive fishing rights to Indians.

Several Natives Charged

LILLOOET (CP) — Federal fisheries officers seized salmon Monday and laid charges against native Indians who defied a two-day fishing ban in effect because of low salmon counts.

Garnet Jones, fisheries division chief responsible for the Fraser river area, said Monday that at least six charges of illegal fishing or fishing without a permit were laid and about 20 salmon were seized.

There was no violence, but Jones agreed it was a tense moment when his three officers confronted about 50 Indians. Some of the Indians stood by beating drums and chanting, while others shouted: "Shoot them, shoot them."

Chief Saul Terry of the Bridge River band said that permits allow fishing Monday through Thursday and that Indians had no intention of obeying the ban.

A special detachment of about 20 fisheries officers were sent here, when seven Indian bands in the area said they intended to ignore the ban. They said Indians should not suffer for what they have called bad fish management by white men.

Jones said the two-day closure is necessary to allow more salmon through to Stuart Lake and to northern Indians who only have the early sockeye to rely on for fish food. He estimated that only about half the needed 100,000 sockeye salmon have run through so far.

Otway told a press conference Monday the campaign is aimed at Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner and Prime Minister Trudeau, who he said must withdraw and stop the spread of special fishing rights given last fall to the Squamish Indian band.

He said that "absolute authority has been granted the band for fisheries management at the mouths of the Capilano, Squamish and Seymour Rivers and already there is a band in Ontario that is after the same rights on reserve land."

The rights were passed by the Squamish band council last fall and made law under the Indian Act when approved by Faulkner on Nov. 2. The approval, Otway said, was made without the knowledge of federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc.

He said also that George Manuel, Union of B.C. Indian Chief president, "is now calling for all Indian bands to write their own bylaws to control the fisheries resource." If this is done and approval given by Ottawa "we will have given away the rights to resource to a select few," he said.

Otway claimed that Indians fishing in the Fraser River may be taking more than 3.3 million kilograms (7,500,000 pounds) of salmon and trout annually.

He said a secret federal fisheries study estimates that about 300,000 salmon and approximately 2,500 steelhead were taken legally from the Fraser River system between Mission and Kamloops last year.

This works out to about 2.4 million pounds (1.1 million kilograms) or about 218 pounds for all Indian men, women and children in the area, he said.

But considering that Indians refuse to tell fisheries how many fish they take or to let them observe fully netting operations, it is reasonable to assume the catch is at least triple the official count.

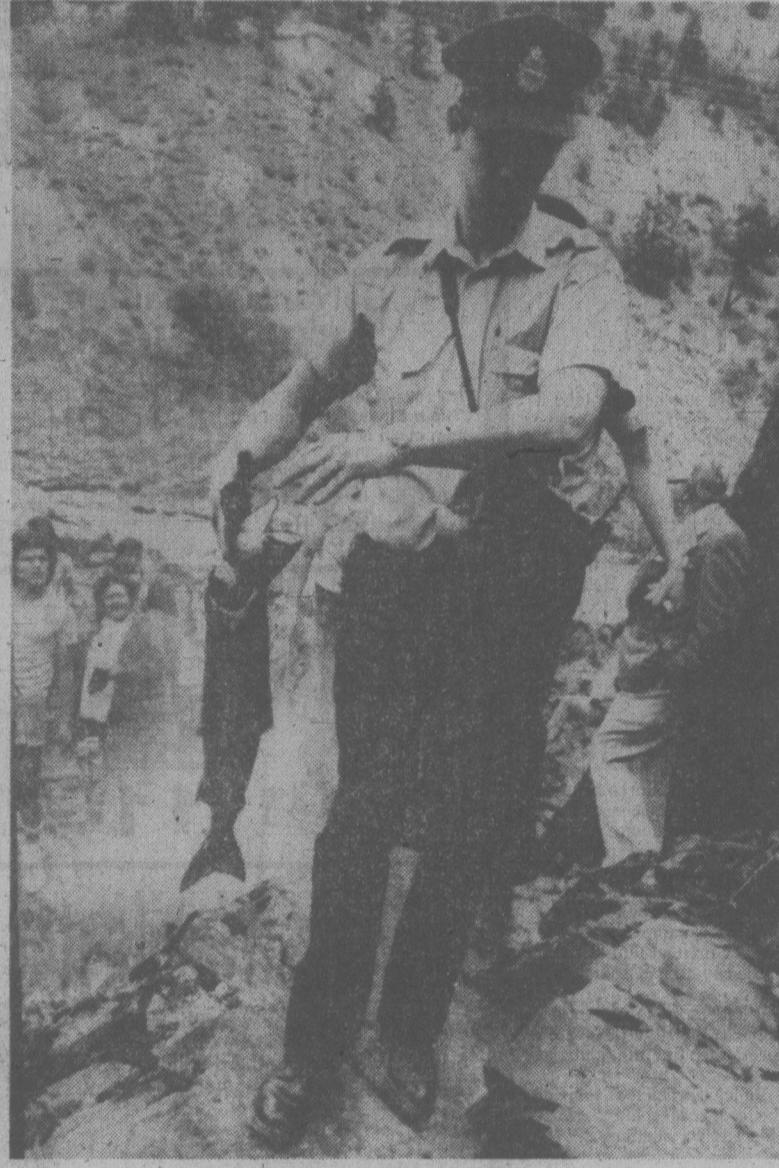

The federation released a news letter headlined "B.C. Fisheries Given Away," which he said now is in the mail to 150,000 homes and is to go eventually to 500,000 homes in this province. It also contains letters of complaint addressed to both Faulkner and Trudeau that the organization hopes people will sign and mail.

Otway predicted the campaign will be similar to the massive campaign launched two years ago that halted the federal government's special firearms bill.

If the Squamish rights are not withdrawn and if the federal fisheries department does not launch a court case to determine who has jurisdiction over the salmon fishery, the federation "will probably have to do it," said Otway.

"But we can't see why there should be further waste of taxpayer's money over a court case when the federal

New Mideast Talks Doomed to Failure?

Fish Talks Stalemated

Union and fishing company negotiators met for more than six hours Monday but failed to reach a solution to a dispute which has crippled the B.C. fishing industry at the height of the salmon season.

No further talks are scheduled between the 600 striking tendermen and the Fisheries Association of B.C., which bargained for 13 fish packing companies.

The tendermen went on strike Sunday and were backed up by 4,300 shoreworkers who walked off the job.

Following Monday's meeting a union spokesman said the companies changed their position on some money matters but held out for a one-year agreement which would include herring as well as salmon.

The tendermen who work on the fish packers want an agreement for handling salmon only and wish to bargain prior to the herring season for rates for handling the herring.

The fisheries association is opposed because the companies feel this will allow the workers to strike twice a year.

The tendermen have rejected a company offer of a $9-a-day increase and are holding out for $12.50 a day.

The shoreworkers have yet to vote on the company's latest offer of a wage increase of 70 cents an hour.

The shoreworkers' base rate now is $6.72 an hour and tendermen wages are $9.3 a day.

LEEDS CASTLE (UPI) — Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers met for more than three hours today in this 1,000-year-old English castle in search of Middle East peace.

A statement by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, however, hinted at failure unless the Israelis come up with some new ideas.

A U.S. spokesman described the first 3½ hour session between Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kamel as "serious and thorough." But the two ministers admitted they were still far apart, and not even certain these negotiations can begin again.

Both agreed that while the gap between Egypt and Israel on a peace settlement is wide, particularly on the future of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, there was some hope of narrowing it.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said "There was a serious and thorough discussion, with all parties working in a straightforward manner."

Before their meeting the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers shook hands. The talks opened in this 1,000-year-old castle surrounded by a moat and standing on two islands in the middle of a lake. Police and troops sealed off the grounds.

I do not know if the Israelis will walk out or not," he added. "What I know is that we have a specific plan for discussion. If new elements appear (well and fine). If not, it would be no use holding (further) negotiations."

Israeli spokesman Naftali Lavie said "It was the start of direct negotiations." But Egyptian spokesman Hamdi Nada said "We are here at the invitation of the United States to find out when direct negotiations can begin again."

Both agreed that while the gap between Egypt and Israel on a peace settlement is wide, particularly on the future of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, there was some hope of narrowing it.

Sadat's statement was broadcast by Caro Radio as he arrived in Khartoum to attend a summit of the Organization of African Unity.

The Egyptian foreign minister has specific instructions that the Egyptian plan should be discussed at the Leeds Castle conference, Sadat said.

I do not know if the Israelis will walk out or not," he added. "What I know is that we have a specific plan for discussion. If new elements appear (well and fine). If not, it would be no use holding (further) negotiations."

The ground-service personnel, 7,500 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, have been without a contract since April 1. They are voting across the country this week on whether to give union leaders a strike mandate.

The union wants a six-percent wage increase for 1978

and 18 per cent for the 18 months beginning Jan. 1, 1979. Air Canada's last offer was for six per cent in each of the two years.

Smuggling Search Continuing

The processing of 15 men charged in Canada's biggest ever marijuana seizure opened today in provincial court.

All 15 — arrested in a pre-dawn raid near Tofino Saturday by a combined force of RCMP and armed forces personnel — are charged with conspiracy to import marijuana.

The arrests came after an estimated 18 tons of marijuana, valued on the underworld at about $28 million, was brought ashore at a secluded cove.

One of the men, Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto, asked his case be remanded.

Judge Fred Green put

Kennedy over to July 27 for a ball hearing.

The processing of the other

Shades of prohibition.
Central Saanich police and RCMP customs officers have cracked a smuggling operation that brought hundreds of cases of U.S. beer by sea to Vancouver Island.

Three Chemainus men are expected to appear in court later in the week charged with illegally importing the beer from the American Gulf Islands.

Their names are being withheld pending their appearance in court. All are believed to be in their mid-20s.

B.C. is well into the second month of the beer strike.

A Central Saanich police spokesman said the men apparently made three trips a day, bringing in 60 cases each time.

21 Die in Heat

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Temperatures soared past 33 Celsius degrees Monday for the 16th day in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, causing the deaths of at least 21 persons, health officials said.

The heat will be another factor in the 16th day in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, causing the deaths of at least 21 persons, health officials said.

Police were waiting for them at a roadblock at Island View and Pat Bay.

Police recovered about 100 cases from the men's residences in Chemainus.

The beer? It will be destroyed, the spokesman said.

Three Central Saanich policemen and two RCMP officers went to the beach at 2:30 p.m.

One hid in a beachfront residence with binoculars trained on each boat entering the ramp. Another posed as a fisherman.

They watched the trio make one drop and leave again for another trip. At 10 p.m., when they returned the officer posing as a fisherman helped the men pack the cases into their truck.

Staff Walkout Delays Ferry

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Ferry passengers faced waits of up to 4½ hours Monday after the crew of the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job before the 2:30 p.m. sail.

The 32 sailors complained that the ferries are understaffed and overloaded and that the British Columbia Ferries Corp. is showing complete disregard for its employees.

The ferry left for Nanaimo following a meeting between the B.C. Labor Relations Board and the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union. Traffic at Horseshoe Bay was backed up more than two kilometres.

A hearing was scheduled for today in Vancouver.

Dissidents and Detente

It is almost impossible not to share in the outrage that has echoed throughout the western world at the Soviet trials of dissidents the past two weeks.

This is the point at which those of us in democratic nations realize the essentially unbridgeable nature of the gap that separates our countries from those of the Communist bloc. No matter how much we trade and share technological information with the Soviet Union and its allies, there will always come a time when we cannot condone the fundamentally harsh and repressive character of their system.

Although we may often complain about the inefficiencies of the democratic system, it remains immensely important that we are free to criticize, loudly, rudely and in public, both the weaknesses of the system and the behavior of the men currently in charge of it. The sight of honorable and courageous men going to jail for periods of 10 years, and more for daring to make such criticisms should give us all an increased sense of the value of that freedom.

It is entirely understandable that our sense of outrage makes us want to take retaliatory action against the Soviet Union, makes us want to say that we cannot co-operate at all with a government that would act in such a manner.

Yet it is important that we do not let our heated passions overcome us in such a way as to threaten the always-tenuous Western-Soviet detente. Detente has never been intended to mean that one side condones or agrees with every step taken by the government of the other side.

Rather, detente was intended as a self-preservation mechanism. It comes about as a result of the recognition that both the Soviet Union and the United States have the armed might to destroy the world as we know it and that maintaining the lines of communication, emphasizing similarities instead of differences, is probably the best way of preventing such destruction.

That goal of preventing war must surely remain paramount. To put it in its most extreme form, it will do little good to continue to fight for the basic human rights of the Soviet dissidents if the result of that fight is a world so ravaged by war as to make it unfit for either the dissidents or anyone else inhabit.

We should certainly continue to express strongly to the Soviets our condemnation of their treatment of dissidents, but we should also ensure that western governments take no action that would create problems even worse than the one they are trying to solve.

Changing Signs

In Quebec last week, the provisions of Bill 101 affecting signs became law. Far from asserting the supremacy of the French language, the sign regulations and the Office de la Langue Francaise's interpretation of them seem only to spotlight the basic pettiness and insecurity of a government so concerned with whether a handle on a door says Pull or Tirez.

The Official Language Act makes illegal almost every English language and bilingual advertising sign and most informational signs in English. The big stores and establishments have conformed to the law, but in many parts of Montreal (which is a cosmopolitan, international city where more than a third of the inhabitants are not French) nobody has changed anything. The OFL will interpret the law leniently and will give owners of businesses 2½ years to adopt French-language legal names; until then they can legally advertise their present title even if it is only in English or is bilingual.

But that does not remove the compulsion to change signs and ads that have served a businessman or shopkeeper perfectly well over the years; it only delays the day some. They are mad today over being forced to change because of a provincial administration's high-flown philosophy of cultural domination, and they will be mad 2½ years hence.

The practical application of the law has resulted in some strange linguistic contortions. Capital City Ice Co. of Ottawa has had to raise the price of a block of ice to $1.25 from $1 because it had to spend $10,000 repainting its freezers on the Quebec side of the Ottawa river to advertise glace, not ice.

In Aylmer, Que., a small town near Ottawa which is about half French and half English, the French-speaking owner of a pet shop is indignant about having to call her establishment "l'animerie."

At the Bay (La Baie) in Montreal, efforts have been made to comply with the law but, sensibly, display cases throughout the department store retain English and French titles: Bagues/Rings, Parfum/Perfume etc. The store's "linguistics co-ordinator" (the law has brought into being all kinds of new and interesting jobs, Orwellian as their titles may seem) says these should be exempt from the law but a "language technician" from the OFL says exemptions apply only to signs in which the English words are engraved, baked or encrusted in metal — not words painted on a neon sign.

Where are those qualities of rational, lucid thought and incisive, logical explanation so justly associated with the French language? Certainly not in this petty and demeaning piece of legislation.

RICHARD GWYN

Look Who's Gone to Bonn

OTTAWA — Robert Johnstone is a truly lousy diplomat. He may be the worst in this town.

He works at his desk, jacketless, tieless and with his shirt sleeves rolled up. On at least one occasion, to the dismay of a distinguished visitor who arrived ahead of schedule, Johnstone was shoeless and sockless as well. Worse yet, Johnstone cannot sit still. At diplomatic dinners or at long, formal meetings, Johnstone will suddenly explode out of his chair and stalk about the room until he's burned off his spare energy.

Johnstone is one of four deputy undersecretaries at External Affairs, a post he reached, in a breach of all tradition, not by rushing through the department's ranks but by being parachuted in from the Bank of Canada by way of the Anti-Inflation Board.

Johnstone, lastly, is typical of the people that one of Prime Minister Trudeau's top aides had in mind when he gave as his explanation why the external affairs department is suddenly in the ascendency in this town. "Because it's being run at last by modern men."

Another of external's new breed is Allan Gotlieb, the undersecretary or top civil servant, an art connoisseur, a Rhodes scholar, probably the brightest of the civil service mandarins and, unquestionably, the ablest territorial in-fighter among them.

New-Breed

A third is the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Don Jamieson, the cabinet's best, least used — by his own choice — talent. In fact, Jamieson wasn't promoted to external but was shuffled there in 1976, to ease him out of trade and commerce.

"Who would have thought, 25 years ago in Gander Cove (Newfoundland), that you and I would ever get here?" Jamieson remarked to his wife Barbara the first time he went down to the United Nations as minister.

Abruptly, Jamieson set out to transform his career. He first applied himself to himself: In the past year, Jamieson has lost 70 pounds, and has lost as well his legendary taste for liquor. Jamieson since has applied himself to external affairs, once Ottawa's most powerful as well as most prestigious department, but long ago hustled out of the action by upstart departments like finance and trade and commerce.

One sign of change happened last December when Jamieson engineered Parliament's first full-scale debate on foreign affairs in 17 years (yes, in 17 years).

A better example is happening right now. Canada's "point" official for the Bonn summit meeting of Western leaders, our entry in a lineup of bureaucratic talent that includes Britain's cabinet secretary or top civil servant, the Governor of the Bank of France and U.S. President Carter's personal emissary, Henry Owen, is not, as at past meetings, one of Trudeau's aides, nor, though the topic is economics, an official from finance or from trade and commerce, but Johnstone.

For once, the right men are moving at the right time into the right place. For about a decade, Canada has been in upon what we have that the U.S. hasn't.

At the same time as everyone is crowding us, they also are leaving us alone. Very much alone.

Soon Canada will be the only industrial country — Israel, South Africa and Australia excepted — without free access to a market of at least 100 million.

(Bit by bit, Europe is knitting itself together: the European Economic Community soon will expand to 12 countries, it is edging its way toward a common currency, and next year will stage the first "direct" election to a single European Parliament. The Soviet equivalent, Comecon, has just added Viet Nam to its expanding, non-European membership of Cuba, Mongolia, and, later, Angola.)

"We are very definitely second tier, and so we have to try a hell of a lot harder," comments one of our negotiators at the international trade and tariff negotiations at Geneva, where his job is to get Canada's voice heard by the "big three" of the first tier, U.S., Japan, and the European Economic Community.

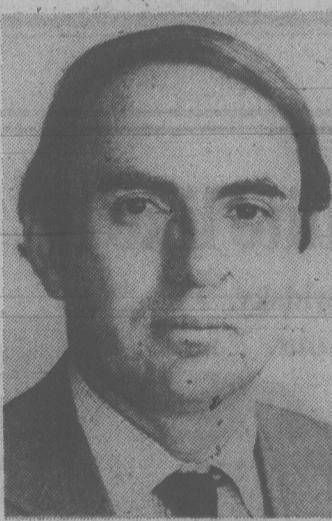

Among the seven nations at the Bonn summit meeting, Canada ranks seventh in terms of population and sixth, ahead of Italy, in economic output. We are there at all only because the U.S., over the objections of France, insisted on it to add a second North American voice to the debate.

Small Stick

At international talks, we carry a small economic stick. The key decisions at Bonn were taken by the U.S. (whether to cut back on oil imports), by Japan (whether to open its market to foreign goods) and by West Germany (whether to expand its economy, and so act as a "locomotive" to pull along the rest of the west).

One part of the Bonn agenda, a small but by no means an insignificant part, has been written by Canada. In addition to worrying about today's problems, Trudeau long has wanted the Western leaders to worry about tomorrow's economic and social problems that will be created if, as seems inevitable, unemployment and inflation remain high and economic growth remains low.

During their two days at the Palais Schaumburg, the seven heads of government discussed both today's problems and tomorrow's consequences of them. Johnstone, unquestionably, is a lousy diplomat. It's worth remembering, though, that he's also known as one of Ottawa's best poker players.

Sham Show

The CBC Canada TV show at the Dominion Day Celebrations at the Victoria Folkfest was a sham and a farce and marred an otherwise perfect day. The expense of thousands of dollars to bring three people to Victoria from out of town plus a band was an insult to Victoria and the rest of Canada.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of equipment and a large crew stood idly by, whilst the Inter-Cultural Association, sponsors of Folkfest put on a fantastic display of talent. June 30 was Black People's Day and marked the 120th year of their arrival in B.C. What an opportunity was missed, to have filmed the performance of their singing and culture and very interesting fashion show from the different dress from various regions of Africa to the rest of Canada. Also ignored on July 1 was the marvelous surprise performance of songs and dances given to the people of Victoria by the Maoris when their ship was visiting here from New Zealand; they ended their show with the famous "Now is the Hour" in Maori and English. Thanks to Folkfest, these were just two outstanding performances among many.

My disgust and anger was echoed by many around me, so I formally protest the intrusion of the CBC's Sham Show. Let the people of Canada put on their own show next July 1, not a phoney staged CBC program. I have seen more fresh talent at Victoria Folkfest during this past week than a whole year on CBC.

I want to thank the Inter-Cultural Association of Victoria and sponsors of Folkfest for a wonderful week of great entertainment, the kiosks for the delicious food, giving a true "taste" of each country represented.

If anyone felt as I did that evening, I would suggest that you write to: Mr. A. W. Johnson, President of the CBC, CBC Building, 1500 Bronson Avenue P.O. 8478, Ottawa, Ontario, K1G 3J5. Tell him there is enough talent in Victoria to provide its own show on Canada's birthday. — Mrs. R. Bowie, Victoria.

Sunday Shopping

Two items in your issue of July 4 carry opposite implications.

A news item describes the harmful effects of use of 2,4-D on grapevines and grape production. This, along with its cumulative damage to human beings, and therefore also to animals, points to the necessity of laws to ban its use in harmful ways.

The second item is your editorial, No Law Needed, on the question of Sunday opening of non-essential business, which describes a propensity among certain merchants to encroach harmfully on other aspects of the social order than the economic in a way similar to that of the users of 2,4-D. Yet you come to the defence of these extremists with their insatiable financial appetite, as though this rapacity did not also need to come under control. You castigate those who object to this as making "a noisy round of complaining," and pooh-pooh the local effort for rational Sunday closing as impractical and almost picayune.

Lawbreaking Sunday opening is due to two main reasons: (1) the thirst for more dollars in the till; and (2) the attempt to meet such illegal competition and prevent all the loot from going to the aggressors. The latter is more pardonable. Of course, the offenders always want to "serve the public!"

I recognize the great debt owed to labor and its unions in the past. The world could not have progressed as it has without them but times have changed and now it has become a battle between giants, so destructive that the nation can no longer tolerate it without ultimately going under. — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

The plain truth is that our economy can no longer afford strikes if it is to survive. It is not only the employers and employees who are the losers. Even more so today the cost is born by innocent third parties, namely, the general public. This goes double for strikes in the public service.

I recognize the great debt owed to labor and its unions in the past. who are granted a free Sunday by the Lord's Day Act, to use that freedom in helping to deny it to their fellow-citizens? Who gains in all this mad scramble and encourage it.

The Lord's Day Act is meant to provide the widest opportunity for as many as possible to have the advantages of family and friendly association; to assure freedom for religious association, and freedom for personal choices of activity not encroaching on the freedom of others unnecessarily.

Six days ought to be enough for business for any reasonable person. Let Sunday be for people.

Perhaps the matter of Sunday law has greater priority with Attorney-General Garde Gardon than may appear on the surface. A few years ago, Sunday law was very much to the fore in Ontario, and their new law was demanded by a high percentage of retail and other business there. It is not impossible for similar action to appear here with comparably strong backing. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Illegal Taxing

The federal minister of finance has admitted in Parliament that the collection of income tax by the federal government is illegal. The British North America Act Section 92 states that only the provinces can collect direct tax that is income tax. During the last war the federal government would collect income tax returning some to the provincial governments. Quebec refused to do this because it is illegal.

Mr. Trudeau's so-called constitutional reforms are aimed to correct this by first repatriating the BNA Act by enacting a Canadian government Constitutional Act and then, among other centralizing changes, to abolish Section 92.

He is within his legal right to enact a new constitution, but it should be done by a constitutional committee and not by Mr. Trudeau's personal say-so. However, Quebec will not allow Section 92 to be abolished because this would infer the giving up of her sovereign rights which all provinces have. — H. S. Thullier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Justice Drags In India

THE ECONOMIST

NEW DELHI — Justice, it is said, should be blind; in India it is also lame. One case in the Karnataka high court has been dragging on for 38 years. The litigant was a bachelor when it began; today he is an old man with 10 grandchildren, some of whom may well have to carry on the legal battle after he is dead.

Two leading industrialists managed to delay court proceedings in a fraud case for more than 25 years before being pronounced guilty. Now they are appealing, and since both are very old the chances are that they will die before the law can catch up with them.

Land reform laws enacted in the 1950s remain unimplemented in many parts of the country because of stay-of-execution orders obtained by landowners who have discovered that by litigating indefinitely they can hang on to their land.

The Supreme Court alone is faced with a backlog of 18,000 cases, of which 1,500 are more than seven years old. More than 600,000 cases are pending in the high courts and millions in the lower courts. The only gainers from this deplorable state of affairs are lawyers, some of whom make a living simply by obtaining stay-of-execution orders.

A story is told of a bright young law graduate who joined his father's legal firm and within a month obtained a favorable verdict in a case which had been hanging fire for several years. His father was aghast at his having cut off his lucrative source of income.

Small wonder that lawyers are opposed to several proposed legal reforms, particularly one that would abolish payment on a daily basis and institute a consolidated fee for an entire case. The government is now consulting judges and the legal profession to see how legal delays and costs can be reduced. It hopes to make suitable amendments to the criminal procedure code and civil procedure code in the next session of parliament.

One reason for India's law-suit mountain is that the country does not have enough judges to cope with the litigation. The government has asked the high courts to accept a voluntary cut of two weeks in their six-week summer recess, but their response has not been encouraging. Nor are the judges enthusiastic about a suggestion that they should sit for three hours on Saturdays and half an hour extra on weekdays.

'In Heaven They'll Bore You; In Hell You Will Bore Them'

LONDON — Have you ever sat through an entire lunch talking about nothing but the weather, and Mrs. Thatcher's hairstyles, only to find you were talking to someone who had just spent 20 years in a Brazilian prison? Or listened to the views of an American seven-year-old Carter and the energy crisis? Or wasted your precious two minutes with a world thinker hearing what a bumpy flight he had from Los Angeles?

Then you'll know that being bored isn't just a matter of talking to the wrong people; it's also having the wrong kind of talk with the right people. But I'm beginning to learn how to avoid it.

What is boring? Boring is any speech beginning 'When I was asked to come here tonight . . .' Boring is the Head's opening remarks; it is thanking the vicar for the loan of the hall. Boring is anything about trade unions from Tories or about bosses from trade unionists; it is anything where you know what's going to be said before the man opens his mouth.

Interesting is how I caught the maths mistress in bed with the bursar, but not how I got my son into Harrow. Interesting is anything about hospitals and operations and the plague, but not doctors talking about tax. Interesting is being told by psychologist John Nicholson that footballers prefer to pass the ball to their friends and in moments of crisis will only pass the ball to their friends; boring is any sports correspondent on The Future of British Football. Boring is all opinions you already know by heart — even, on occasion, your own.

A highly subjective list, I admit. But

The Dangerous Fools of the Kremlin

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

A new production of the theatre of cynicism has been held in Moscow, with Anatoly Shcharansky as its central character and victim. The Soviet Union called it a "trial". The setting was a facsimile courtroom. The supporting characters played judges and court officials, going through the motions of hearing and weighing evidence against Mr. Shcharansky on a charge of high treason. But this was a performance for which the script had already been written. It was, like the medieval play, not a search for justice but an exercise in propaganda.

If there was any doubt on this score, even a flicker of hope that the Soviet courts had become less Stalinist than they were 40 or more years ago, that hope was quenched by the recent example of Moscow justice at work in the comparatively minor case of the libel charges laid against two American correspondents, Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun and Craig Whitney of The New York Times, who were pronounced guilty by the official Soviet press five days before the court proceedings began. In a country with real courts, or real newspapers, this would be contempt of court. In Moscow it is state policy.

Why was Mr. Shcharansky accused of high treason?

He is, for a start, Jewish and he refuses to pretend that he is not. That has always been in Russia, under the new Czars as well as the old, grounds for deep suspicion. Reactionary, repressive regimes and anti-Semitism in some form, proclaimed or denied, official or unofficial, implicit or explicit, are natural running mates. This is one of the many sicknesses that Soviet Russia, the Argentina of the generals, and the South Africa of the white bunker, have in common.

Shcharansky applied in 1973 for permission to emigrate to Israel. When permission was refused he had the temerity to protest the refusal. This experience led him into activity with a civil-rights movement that concerned itself with a broad range of problems arising from the suppression of rights, human, civil, cultural, linguistic, religious, in the Soviet Union.

And thus, in the logic of the Kremlin, it becomes imperative to demonstrate that such dissidence is subversive, treasonous.

This too is a sickness that Moscow shares with its soul-mates, of whatever political stripe, in other corners of the world. The creed is kept sacred and inviolate; to criticize the suppression of rights in the Soviet Union is to be in the service of the Central Intelligence Agency, or at least of "Cold War circles." In South Africa, to oppose apartheid is to be in the service of communism. Pretoria's Suppression of Communism Act supports that doctrine with chapter and verse.

Such institutionalized paranoia is, of course, nothing new. In the Spain of Francisco Franco any dissent, of any sort, was seen as the work of the "Communist-Jewish-Masonic conspiracy." Even the middle-class Catalans nationalist, probably a devout Catholic, almost certainly an extremely devout capitalist and, quite possibly, with a bit of a leaning toward anti-Semitism, was in Franco's eyes a "Communist-Jewish-Masonic" conspirator. Similarly, no doubt, Moscow will soon inform us that Joan Baez, who took advantage of a visit to the Soviet Union to criticize the official repression of human rights there, has become, in spite of her record of public opposition to the Vietnam war and support for civil rights at home, a notorious member of Cold War circles.

Like all totalitarians, the men of the Kremlin lack any sense of the ridiculous. And lacking that, they make fools of themselves; dangerous fools, menacing fools, monstrous fools, perhaps; but still fools. For by making their state the enemy of all that is human — the loyalties, the traditions, the faiths, the cultural treasures, the values, the particularities and peculiarities that make each of us unique — they make all that is human the enemy of their state.

Gambling: A Love Affair That Always Ends Badly

By HENRY ALLEN
The Washington Post

You've got to twitch and shake

I get nervous around gambling. I don't worry about losing money, I worry about looking like a jerk. I worry that if I ask how you play, all the players will boo. I worry that I'll jinx myself, like when I didn't tip the limousine driver when we pulled up in front of Atlantic City's Resorts International.

I am standing at the top of some steps, overlooking the vast factory gloom of the Resorts casino. I have $250 smoldering like a dump fire in my pocket. I spent a lot of last night studying books about how to win. I've just jogged three miles on the Boardwalk. I breakfasted on one glass of grapefruit juice. I want to be crisp, radically aggressive, running on pure adrenaline.

I buy $50 in five-dollar chips from a dealer given to baroque ironies: "Surely no one is unhappy with the dealer!" Like all the male dealers, he wears a black suit with a black bow tie. He snaps the cards out of the shoe with startling speed, paying off bets and making change with the ritual gestures of a magician.

"Place your bets, all bets placed, no more bets please."

Cards appear. Six and two. "Hit me," I say.

"Sorry, sir, I can't accept anything but a hand signal."

"What's the hand signal?"

It seems you twitch a hand towards yourself for a card, shake it as if you're drying fingernail polish to show you'll stick with what you've got. I twitch, and draw a jack, for a total of 18. But the dealer has blackjack. I push another $5 into the little betting circle in front of me. We're off again. It's like riding a bus where you have to pay a fare after every stop. This time I get blackjack, which pays $7.50 for my 25. The next hand, I get the $7.50, and win when the dealer breaks, or goes over 21.

I like this. My heart pounds. My brain knots with concentration. I'm counting tens and fives. A lot of tens left in the deck favors the player while fives favor the dealer, according to computer research.

After an hour, I'm up $15, plus one free drink it took the waitress half an hour to deliver. (Players drink for free.) I tip her $1 anyway, to nurture my luck.

After two hours, I'm up $70, feeling very confident indeed.

After three hours my profits are dwindling. I can't count one more card, the way you'd feel if you'd just driven straight through from Chicago in the rain. I'm up $28.50. I recall that when I got to the table, I was afraid of being nibbled to death by the house advantage, a death of a thousand cuts. Now, with $28.50 to show for three hours' work, I am living the life of a thousand cuts. With the rationalization of the truly greedy, I decide I'd rather win or lose more, faster. Go for all the gusto. I'm ready for the baccarat able.

Before I arrived, I had this vision of myself at the baccarat table, silky as hell in a tuxedo, smoking a cork.

tipped Rothman's, a little bored as the chips pile up in front of me and the women line up in back. Neither matters, of course, when you're packing a Walther 9mm in your shoulder holster and a death warrant in your pocket.

The old James Bond fan-tasy.

The problem was that I didn't know how to play baccarat. Or craps. Or big money blackjack. And if there were fine points to roulette or the slot machines, I didn't know them either. (Also, I don't have a tuxedo. What I've got is a sort of tumbldry look, like a fanatic prep-school teacher.)

I eat dinner high-roller style, in the red plush and mirrors of the hotel's Le Palais. The meal — oysters, lamb chops, raspberries, Pino Chardonnay — is terrific, though the service is more colloquial than would be preferred by the first man to break the bank in Atlantic City.

Now it's time for the icy spoons of baccarat.

I flick through my baccarat pamphlet once more. The only strategy is in the betting. I elect the "avant dernier" system, meaning that I place my bet on the position that won the time before last. (There are two positions — two bank wins, two player wins, two bank wins. Betting avant dernier, meaning I bet the winner-before-last, means that I lose every time. Panic flickers around the edges of my self-confidence.

I hate losing. I hate that gray smog I feel, like they just re-routed the Baltimore Harbor Tunnel through my abdomen. I feel jilted. I stalk out of the hotel, looking for a drink somewhere quiet and dark, with no cards, no dice, no factory roar of slot machines. They are like the guys in the Roman galleys, one with the whip, the other beating time with a mallet.

I shoot my cuffs, finish my brandy, and glide into the baccarat pit.

Three dealers manage the chips and play the cards. At each end of the table two pit bosses survey the action from red-cushioned swivel chairs.

They are like the guys in the Roman galleys, one with the whip, the other beating time with a mallet.

I lose my first bet, win the next two, double up and lose the fourth, win the fifth, $20 a crack. You can get high on this — a fine, cool, racing sensation.

The next morning, I'm standing in line, waiting for the casino to open at 10 a.m. I have $50 left, and I'm willing to sprint to get a seat at a $5 blackjack table, with a red-headed female dealer and three Japanese girls.

It takes an hour. I get $25 up, and then the great beast that is fortune starts gnawing away, $5 per bite. I make a vug to go out in style, if I have to go. I get down to my last $20. I put it all in the betting circle, one hand, do or die. The dealer and I tie, which in casino blackjack means my money stays out there. The next hand, I draw two jacks, for 20. The dealer shows a three. My heart starts its war-drum beat again. The dealer flips over her down card, a 10. Thirteen! Visions of baccarat, a restoration of my lethally wry smile! The dealer draws an eight, for 21, my jacks and money vanish and I stroll away from the table, after tipping some small chips which total $4.

I feel curiously good. All relieved. Gambling, I decide, is like a love affair — it always ends badly, sooner or later. You just want to get out with some dignity. Even like life itself, I think, as I head for the raw oyster bar to invest all of my love and hope in a platter of 12 Bluepoints on the half shell, each one a fresh, cold, saltwater, shimmering winner.

there's some sort of sense to it. Most facts are interesting especially if there's some chance they might be true, and you can take them from anybody: there are far fewer people from whom it's safe to take opinions. The best guidelines to follow are those of age and sex.

No woman can bore me as much as some men — and I dare say they keep us out of their clubs because they feel the same about us. With another woman, whether she's half way to being George Sand or half way to the inebriates home, I can always find some common ground — brat behavior or how to get lipstick off trousers; the Algonquin Round Table it ain't, but we can get by.

Age is even more crucial. Few things are more yawn-making than the sweeping, unreal politics of people under 20; their opinions are almost bound to be banal because they've started so recently at Square One in the major arguments. But their perceptions of such things as they have experienced — their zany juxtapositions of things that we, from long habit, keep apart (like saxophones and the Church of England, foxgloves and rockets) — they can be fascinating. From them, you can get speculation, science fiction, imaginings, ideas, while all the wild winds are still tearing through their minds.

Equally, the opinions of anyone much past 65, unless they've exceptionally agile and original minds, will be pretty unthrilling: they've been rolled out so often the treads have worn off them. The more beautiful and true they are, the less chance there is of their being half-way new; and the odds against getting them to change their minds about anything make genuine discussion almost impossible.

So why try? Why let them tell you how soft young people have become these days, when you can get them to tell you how tough they were in the thirties? It's absurd to listen to someone over 70 denouncing the bra-burning women's libbers, when they could be telling you how they held up before the bra was even invented. The most boring old woman I ever knew was fascinating when she talked about her blue wedding dress before the First World War — they were far too poor for a white one. And I once looked forward with glee to sitting next to a senior politician, his views as blue as the veins on his nose — only to be riveted with his stories about Churchill in the doldrums before the war.

Of course, all this is only half the problem: 'In heaven they may bore you; in hell, you will bore them.' Still, if you can get people talking interestingly, the chances are they'll never notice if you don't open your mouth at all.

Women Follow Retail Trend

WINNIPEG (CP) — More and more married women are starting their own businesses — both as a cure for boredom and a means of self-expression.

"Once it was the exception, al woman who owned her own business," said Roxanne Sigmar, who runs a gift shop. "Now women see others in business and say, 'Hey, why can't I?'"

Most of the businesses started by Winnipeg woman in recent years small retail shops — small enough to be run by two or three people. Many seem to be financed by husbands at a cost of between $65,000 and $85,000.

Mrs. Sigmar was a graphic artist with Winnipeg's Health Sciences Centre before opening her business five months ago. While her former job gave her security, she said it offered no incentive.

Audrey Weidman, co-owner of a stationery shop, said she had little previous knowledge of retail business, but she also knew that working for someone else isn't appealing.

Joan Desilets, a partner in a tropical plant shop and landscape consulting service, said when once she got a taste of the business world, she wanted more.

"I was at home with a family and it just wasn't as rewarding as it was supposed to be."

Husbands and fathers are close-at-hand sources of free advice.

While successful husbands want their wives to be equally successful in business, the problems of bruised egos and altered family relationships can easily arise.

NICE AND EASY is the best policy at the Tudor Crystal glassworks in England, where a craftsman uses a grindstone coated with water to shape a full lead crystal spirit decanter. After the grinding, the decanter is acid-polished, then has a matte design engraved around the shoulder. When finished, it will form part of an expensive range of glassware.

Air Industry Recovering From Arrow

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's aerospace industry has bounced back from the negative image it received when the controversial Avro Arrow program was abruptly cancelled in 1959.

"The mid 1970s have seen the emergence of a strong industry with steadily increasing employment and a high proportion of export sales," D. C. Lowe, president of the Aerospace Industries Association of Canada, said in a recent speech.

He described the industry as small but dynamic, with a "strong technology base which can be capitalized upon for solving a wide range of industrial problems."

The industry suffered a severe setback when the then prime minister, John Diefenbaker, halted the program for the innovative, high-technology aircraft Feb. 20, 1959.

Many skilled people who had been working on the program at the Avro Aircraft Ltd. plant in nearby Malton, now Mississauga, moved to the United States and other countries where there was a demand for their services.

With sales forecast to reach $1.35 billion in 1980, the industry has once again become a major contributor to Canada's economy.

He said that in terms of exports of transportation equipment, the aerospace manufacturing industry ranks second only to motor vehicles and parts.

"In 1977, Canadian sales of aerospace products shared fifth place with Japan in the Western world."

Employment in the industry was 28,000, up from 25,300 in 1976. Lowe said the average employment in the six years to 1976 was about 27,000 "and is forecast to continue moving upward during the next few years, reaching 31,000 in 1980."

Lowe said the industry's strategy has been "to do a few things well and thus position ourselves to compete aggressively in the world market."

This has placed it squarely in competition with international competition. But the industry rose to the challenge and now boasts that 80 per cent of its sales are in export markets.

"We are enjoying a strong world-wide growth in aviation and, in particular, general aviation," said Lowe.

Vancouver. Conversation took place Monday before players embarked on practice rounds in preparation for 72-hole event that winds up Saturday. Russell captured title in 1967 and 1968. Kerr took it in 1960, the last time the Amateur was played at Uplands. (Times photo by Bill Halkett)

If That Putter Gets Hot, Watch Out for Russell!

By DOUG PEDEEN
Times Sports Editor

Perhaps it is because Johnny Russell has been around for a long, long time. Or maybe thinking has been influenced by the fact that it has been 10 years since the blond veteran from Vancouver's Point Grey course bagged his last provincial crown.

Whatever the reason, the name of Johnny Russell has not been particularly prominent while people have been predicting probable winners of the British Columbia Amateur golf championship tournament that starts Wednesday at the 5,712-metre, par-70 Uplands layout on Cadboro Bay Road.

Getting big support as pre-tourney favorites are Doug Roxburgh, the former Canadian Amateur king from Vancouver who is gunning for a third straight provincial title, and Dave Mick, the Victoria dentist who this year has won the Victoria City Amateur and Island Open championships.

Also near the top are a dozen or more of the younger fairway tigers, those supple swingers who can belt a ball almost out of sight of the tees. In their ranks are players like Bill Hobbs, a former-Victorian who was a member of the B.C. provincial team last year while residing in Prince George and has since moved to Calgary; Nanaimo's Sandy Harper, Vancouverites Harry White, Dick Zokol and Don Griffiths, and Victorians Grant Milliken, Lee Haskell, Carl Schwantje and Gordie Rands.

Among other possible threats is veteran Lawrie Kerr of Royal Colwood, winner of the Amateur in 1960, the last time it was held at Uplands.

Many of the big hitters are capable of giving par a terrible thrashing on their better days. All, however, are not renowned for accuracy and therein lies a peril, because the Amateur goes for 72 holes over four days and visits to the ankle-deep rough or trees beside the Uplands fairways could be score-wrecking experiences.

That is one reason for suggesting to the tigers that they shouldn't count Russell out of the title chase.

Now 46, Johnny long ago learned the dangers of tough courses, and he has tournament experience coming out of his ears. He can still move the ball a long way, but he doesn't make a habit of straying into the tulles and he knows when to use caution and when to go for broke. He also knows how to win.

Russell has captured two B.C. Amateur crowns — at Shaughnessy in 1967 and at Gorge Vale in 1968 — and counts among his other conquests two Vancouver City Amateur victories and a Vancouver match-play triumph in 1966, when he went on to defeat Island champion Ron MacLeod for the provincial match-play championship.

Then there's pride in his success at earning a place on the B.C. Willingdon Cup team. Thirteen times, starting in 1956, Johnny has been a member of the provincial squad at the Canadian Amateur tourney.

"I hope to keep clear my record of having never missed the B.C. team for two straight years since 1964," said Russell Monday afternoon before starting a practice round at Uplands. "And I missed last year."

Admitting to losing a little length off the tees in the past couple of years and confessing to some worries about a sometimes-inconsistent short game, Russell believes that "I'm still a contender."

"I feel I'm hitting the ball just about as well as ever," commented the solidly-built man who once was a plus-two handicap and now plays to a scratch rating. "I've played very steady golf this year."

"However, when good young players like Roxburgh get hot, steady golf is not enough. You have to tear it up to stay with them."

"There are times when my putting stroke works so well that I feel I can sink almost anything. I hope this is one of those times."

Johnny's putter must have been working with remarkable precision one day last year at Point Grey. On that occasion he made a shambles of the previous course record of 66, touring the layout with nine-hole tallies of 34 and 28 for 10-under-par 62.

That should make it obvious to the tigers that if that putter gets hot, "watch out for Johnny Russell!"

For the record, three-somes involving Russell, Mick, Roxburgh and other feared contenders start Wednesday between 10 a.m. and noon, and on Thursday between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

CFL Scores to Settle

By Canadian Press

There are two games in the Canadian Football League tonight, but there are more than a couple of scores to be settled.

Toronto Argonauts, who visit Montreal Alouettes for an Eastern Football Conference match, are out to prove a point.

The Argos, who beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 34-22 in their season opener, hope to show a wide-open style of offence can work.

SMITH MAY UNVEIL NEW CAR TONIGHT

Don Dowdy of Yakima, Wash., among the favorites in this week's International Drivers' Challenge series for superstocks, may not have his car ready for tonight's segment of the six-race series at Western Speedway.

Dowdy crashed early last Friday in the series opener in Spokane, tearing off the front end of his 1976 Ventura. If he and his crew are unable to repair the car by tonight, he may be behind the wheel of a 1976 Nova belonging to Roy Smith of Victoria.

Smith, another IDC favorite, plans to unveil a new '78 Camaro in tonight's race. He had the Seattle-built car on the speedway track Monday night for test runs.

Also expected to set a hot pace tonight is Ron Eaton of Tacoma, winner of Friday's opener, second-place finisher Tim Williamson of Seaside, Calif., and third-place Roy Haslam of Victoria.

George Doonan of Surrey, who suffered a broken back Friday when a throttle stuck and his car hurtled through a retaining fence, may be transported home from hospital in Spokane this week. He's expected to be laid up for six months.

Time trials tonight and for Thursday's IDC race, also at Western Speedway, begin at 7 followed by racing at 8.

Bud Riley, Toronto offensive co-ordinator, said the object is an attack "where everyone, not just a few, gets the ball."

In the west, Winnipeg Blue Bombers want to demonstrate their 30-14 loss last week to B.C. Lions was only a temporary lapse.

Bomber head coach Ray Jauh has been juggling his lineup for the clash in Winnipeg against his former club, Edmonton Eskimos.

Riley said he has lots of respect for Terry Metcalf, the running back acquired in the off-season from St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League, but he doesn't expect miracles.

Metcalf didn't exactly burn up the field when the Argos dropped a 27-23 exhibition game in Montreal July 4 — he had 52 yards on 12 carries and caught four passes for 26 yards including one touchdown play — and he hasn't forgotten his first meeting with Montreal.

"They sure did cheap-shot me," said the Toronto quarterback. "No, they didn't face-mask me, though they did that to some other guys. They just hit me on the face, period. And they hit late."

Montreal head coach Joe Scannella has had to make some late adjustments, recalling import running back Ken Starch three days after he was placed on waivers last Friday.

An Alouettes official said veteran defensive end Junior Ah Yu was a doubtful starter because of a pulled groin muscle. And defensive tackle McDonald, another IDC favorite, plans to unveil a new '78 Camaro in tonight's race. He had the Seattle-built car on the speedway track Monday night for test runs.

Turcotte Improving Slightly

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Turcotte, injured in a spill at Belmont Park, was listed in hospital Monday as stable with slight improvement.

Dr. Valo Benjamin of University Hospital, the physician who performed neurosurgery on Turcotte last Friday, said there were no complications or fever from the operation although the loss of sensation below the waste persisted 72 hours after the operation.

Dr. Valo Benjamin said a bone was lifted away from Turcotte's spinal column and the

'Greedy Moneymaker' Reggie Suspended for Ignoring Sign

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson says he is being placed in the position of "greedy moneymaker" against the poor little street fighter" after his indefinite suspension without pay for bunting when he was ordered to swing away by manager Billy Martin in an American League baseball game Monday night.

"He doesn't want me around here, he should be happy now," said a calm Jackson when told of Martin's decision to suspend him. "Billy hasn't spoken to me for a year and a half so why should he talk to me now? Why should he tell me? Why should I talk to him?"

Jackson was batting after Thurman Munson singled with none out in the 10th inning of a 5-5 game that Kansas City eventually won 9-7 in 11 innings. Third base coach Dick Howser relayed the bunt sign to Jackson from Martin on the first pitch from Al Hrabosky.

"The bunt was on, on the first pitch," Martin said in a terse, hand-written note that he read to reporters after a 30-minute private discussion with general manager Cedric

Tallis. "It was then taken off via verbal instructions by the third-base coach. The manager's orders were just disregarded. He bunted in defiance of a verbal order to hit."

In attempting to bunt, Jackson eventually popped to the catcher on a two-strike count. He was then told by one of Billy's coaches, Gene Michael, that his services were no longer needed during the game.

"Reggie Jackson is suspended without pay effective this moment for deliberately disregarding the manager's instructions," read Martin's statement.

Jackson, 32, spoke of the play in the Yankees' locker room following the game but before Martin's announcement of the suspension.

"I wanted to get him home the best way I could," said Jackson of Munson. "If I get it down, I'm a hero. If not, I'm a bum."

"I've got a man, Lou Piniella, hitting .320 behind me and we've got a good chance to score and win if I move the man up."

"I come off as a big, greedy moneymaker. I'm not going to file a suit or a grievance."

Rookie Ranger Pitcher Impressive In First Start

By Canadian Press

Steve Comer, bypassed in major league baseball's 1976 free-agent draft, may never be overlooked again.

The 24-year-old Texas rookie, who went to the Rangers' training camp this spring as a non-roster player, blanked Baltimore Orioles on four hits through nine innings in his first major league start Monday night — a game won by the Rangers 2-0 in 11 innings.

"He couldn't have been much better, unless it would have been a no-hitter," said Texas manager Billy Hunter. "I was just hoping we'd get him a run, after we he pitched."

The Rangers didn't score until Bump Wills rode home on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Bonds, and Juan Benitez followed with a solo home off loser Mike Flanagan, trying to become the first 14-game winner in the major leagues.

Only three Baltimore runners reached second base against Comer before he gave way to winner Reggie Cleveland, 3-3, in the 10th. The Swift Current, Sask., native retired all six batters he faced to reverse the 2-1 decision he dropped in the 12th inning Sunday.

Elsewhere in the American League, Kansas City Royals outlasted New York Yankees 9-7 in 11 innings, Oakland A's whipped Toronto Blue Jays 5-3, Milwaukee Brewers blazed Chicago White Sox 6-1, Cleveland Indians dumped Seattle Mariners 5-2, Boston Red Sox shaded Minnesota Twins 3-2 in 10 innings and Detroit Tigers edged California Angels 4-3, also in 10 innings.

Comer, who had never gone more than 6-13 innings in 15 relief appearances, struck out seven while throwing 113 pitches. He fooled the Orioles frequently with his change-up delivery.

"He looks like a right-handed Sandy Koufax out there," Cleveland said of Comer, who now boasts a 0.69 earned-run average.

"He has a lot of confidence and poise for a kid who's been in the game only a couple of years," Cleveland said. "He throws strikes and gets the ball down, and uses all his pitches."

Comer, signed as an undrafted free agent, has not allowed an earned run in his last 18 innings, and only one in his last 31 1-3 innings. He has compiled a 3-2 record in relief.

Morganti's Triple Helps Sink Salem

SALEM — Victoria Mussels, well-rested after two straight days off, came up with a solid performance Monday to blank Salem Gans in Northwest League baseball action.

Jim Chapman followed Morganti with a single and advanced on Al Alpaugh's double. Dan Gans smacked a double to push across the third run.

Alpaugh gave Mussels the three-hitter for the victory, striking out five batters and walking only one while boosting his mound record to 2-0.

Mussels had the first two games against Salem postponed Saturday and Sunday because of wet conditions.

Morganti's triple set off a three-run salvo in the ninth inning that sealed Victoria's win.

Jim Chapman followed Morganti with a single and advanced on Al Alpaugh's double. Dan Gans smacked a double to push across the third run.

Alpaugh gave Mussels the three-hitter for the victory, striking out five batters and walking only one while boosting his mound record to 2-0.

In other games, Bellingham edged Eugene 8-6 and Walla Walla defeated Boise, 10-6.

'Rocks Meet Burrards With Three-Fold Goal

Victoria Shamrocks, one game away from clinching their second league championship in three years, had an interesting week ahead of them. But then so do all the other Western Lacrosse Association clubs as they close on the playoffs.

Tonight, the Shamrocks travel to Vancouver to meet arch-rival Burrards and their goal is three-fold.

First, the Irish, who have been knocked out of the playoffs the last two seasons by Burrards, would dearly love to partly avenge for those setbacks by getting the clincher at Kerrisdale Arena.

Secondly, a victory would give the Rocks the opportunity to sweep the season against the Mann Cup champions. Shamrocks have won the first four games between the clubs this year and meet them at home in the final regular season home game on July 26.

Thirdly, the Shamrocks will be without the services of Rick Baker for the balance of the regular season. He is suffering from a torn cartilage in his knee and has been ordered to rest. He will be available for the playoffs.

The Rocks will be without the services of Rick Baker for the balance of the regular season. He is suffering from a torn cartilage in his knee and has been ordered to rest. He will be available for the playoffs.

The two teams are all even on the season going into this final game. The Rocks have won both meetings here and Nanaimo has won two and earned a tie in Nanaimo.

Besides, Nanaimo is battling for a playoff berth and as the league championship club gets to meet the third place finisher in the playoffs, the closing part of the schedule will tell all.

As things now stand, Coquitlam needs five points to catch Burrards and/or the Timbermen. Burrards and Timbermen each need two wins or two Coquitlam losses, or any combination thereof to insure themselves of a playoff position while New Westminster Salmons will be without the services of Rick Baker for the balance of the regular season. He is suffering from a torn cartilage in his knee and has been ordered to rest. He will be available for the playoffs.

Caps Clinch Playoff Spot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps scored twice in the first half and hung on for a 2-1 victory over Oakland Stompers in a North American Soccer League game Monday night before 18,783 fans.

The eight-point win enabled the Whitecaps to clinch a playoff spot in the Western division of the league's national conference.

The Whitecaps improved their record to 18-6 for 16 points, nine ahead of second-place Portland Timbers. The Whitecaps meet the Timbers in Portland Friday night.

Alan Hinton assisted on both Vancouver goals and set a NASL record for most consecutive games with an assist. It was the sixth game in which the 35-year-old winger recorded an assist, breaking the old mark held jointly by George Best and Carlos Metidieri. Hinton also holds the record for most assists in a season with 21 so far this season.

Bob Lenarduzzi scored the opening goal for Vancouver, heading an excellent cross from Hinton past Oakland goaltender Shep Messing at 18:51.

Less than two minutes later, Hinton found Kevin Hector alone in front and the Whitecaps leading scorer drilled a shot past Messing's left side for his 14th goal of the season.

The hard-tackling Stompers took control of the game in the second half, getting a goal at 8:57 from Archie Roboos-toss.

Oakland, however, couldn't get the equalizer as the Whitecaps defense shut them off inside.

Hungarians Jolt Italian Cup Team

Times News Services
Italy, winner in 1976 and runner-up last year, has suffered a surprise defeat in a European Zone B Davis Cup tennis semi-final against Hungary in Budapest.

Peter Szoekoe gave the Hungarians a winning 3-1 lead when he beat Italy's No. 1 Adriano Panatta, 6-3, 6-4, 6-0, in the first of Sunday's singles matches.

Panatta, runner-up to Bjorn Borg in the Italian championships in May, had an outstanding chance to push the match into a fifth set when he led 6-5 in the fourth with his service to come.

But Szoekoe, better known as a 'doubles player, broke Panatta in the 12th game, held his own service and then broke again as the Italian finished the match with a double fault.

The Hungarians eventually won the tie 4-1, their No. 1 Balazs Taroczy beating Corrado Barazzutti, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, in a leisurely final singles.

In the Zone B final, Hungary will meet Sweden, which was led to a 3-2 victory over Spain in Baastad by Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg.

Borg, 22, swept aside Jose Higueras, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, in the deciding singles after Manuel Orantes of Spain had levelled the tie 2-2 by beating Kjell Johansson, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

Britain, which beat France 3-2 in Paris, and Czechoslovakia, 5-0 winner over Romania in Prague, will meet in the Zone A final in Eastbourne, England, next month.

Buster Mottram clinched an unassailable 3-1 lead for Britain by disposing of Eric Deblicker, 7-5, 6-4, 6-1, and it was of no more than academic interest that 18-year-old Yannick Noah beat Britain's John Lloyd in straight sets.

Seven countries now are left in the 1978 Davis Cup—the four European teams, cup-holder Australia, which has won the Eastern Zone, and the United States and Chile, scheduled to contest the American Zone final in September.

While the Davis Cuppers were playing mainly for glory, Vitus Gerulaitis was getting considerably richer Sunday by defeating Romanian Ilie Nastase, 6-2, 6-0 in the singles final of the first Forest Hills Invitational tournament at New York.

Winner of the World Championship Tennis final earlier this year, the 23-year-old New Yorker was simply quicker in every phase of the game than was the 32-year-old Nastase as he enjoyed a $100,000 payday.

In the doubles final, Australians Phil Dent and John Alexander edged Americans Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair 7-6, 7-6 to split $25,000.

Two hard-hitting Argentines dueled in the final of the Swiss tournament in Gstaad with Guillermo Vilas, 26, subduing 19-year-old Jose Luis Clerc 6-3, 7-6, 6-4.

At Toronto, Australian Bill Lloyd became the first two-time winner in men's singles on the six-tournament Challengers Circuit. Winner of the B.C. Open title at Victoria two weeks earlier, Lloyd won the Ontario Open crown with a 6-0, 6-2 decision over California's Chip Fisher.

Zenda Liess collected her third successive women's singles triumph on the Circuit with a 6-0, 6-7, 6-0 win over Aleida Speix in an all-American final.

Elsewhere Sunday, Eddie Dibbs of Miami defeated Mexican Raul Ramirez 6-3, 6-3 in the Western Open singles final at Cincinnati and Bernie Minton of South Africa outlasted Australian John James to win the Hall of Fame championship at Newport, R.I.

Holland's veteran racer, Joop Zoetemelk, who was only four seconds behind Pollentier in the general classification, took the lead in the three-week-long race that ends in Paris next Sunday.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 24-year-old, one of six men originally charged after the April 15 rampage at Jordan River prison camp, was sentenced to 4½ months in jail by Judge Fred Green in Victoria provincial court Monday.

Clarence William Parenteau, who was charged under the false name of Paul Reuben Cardiff, was given the term after Green noted Parenteau appeared to be disengaged from the main riot which produced fire damage estimated at $300,000 that morning.

Parenteau entered a guilty plea through lawyer Brian MacKenzie to the charge of "setting fire to material likely to cause a fire" on July 6 and was remanded for a pre-sentence report. He was originally charged with the more serious offence of arson.

MacKenzie reminded the court that his client started a small fire in a trash can and tried to put it out with other inmates. MacKenzie also pointed out that Parenteau was up on a hillside area when the main destruction was going on and that the young man had also been drinking homebrew which was stashed on prison grounds.

Six men were originally charged but 20-year-old John Richard Marlow died July 2 in Victoria General Hospital following a June 4 fire in his cell at Wilkinson Road jail.

Bruce Andrew Conway, 24, was sentenced to 21 days in jail while a 21-year-old woman was handed a suspended sentence and six months probation after they pleaded guilty to theft of meat and honey from Wellburn's Market, 1058 Pandora, Friday afternoon.

Conway, of 1534 Elford, was given the jail term after Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Conway had convictions for theft in 1972, 1974 and 1975 and had received jail sentences each time. Conway also had convictions for possession of stolen property, forgery, possession of a narcotic, assaulting a peace officer and impaired driving.

His co-accused, Sarah Bradley Hutchins, 1115 Caledonia, was given the suspended sentence but was also ordered to take any psychiatric or life-skills counselling as directed by her probation officer.

Lang said the pair took a steak valued at $4.45, a roast valued at $5.18, and a container of honey valued at $1.89 and had to be chased by store employees.

Green told a 19-year-old to reassess his lifestyle before sentencing him to 10 days in jail for stealing two bottles of soda pop.

Kevin Michael Cordingley, who pleaded guilty to theft under $200, told police following a chase and arrest near Hampton Park on Sunday that he stole the two bottles of 7-Up because he needed mixer for the rye he was drinking at the time.

Court was informed Cordingley went to the Warehouse store at 3400 Tillicum and walked out without paying the $2.66 for the 1.5-litre bottles.

Lang said Saanich police arrested Cordingley and found only 45 cents on him.

Before passing sentence, Green noted that Cordingley had four previous convictions since 1976.

A 22-year-old who changed his plea on a charge of breaking and entering was remanded until Thursday for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Defence lawyer Bruce McConnon entered the change of plea on behalf of John Gordon Marshall, 2891 Craigowan, who was scheduled for trial Monday afternoon.

Lang said that Marshall was seen inside the Gorge Vale Golf Club, 1003 Craigflower, at about 1:30 a.m. on June 20, by Esquimalt police on routine patrol. Lang said the officers grabbed Marshall as he was coming out

Harmac Strike Averted

NANAIMO (CP) — A threatened strike by workers at the Harmac pulp mill near here has been averted after the Harmac Paper and Woodworkers of Canada received an anonymous cheque for $110.

A 46-year-old Langford man, who has three previous convictions for impaired driving, was sentenced to concurrent 45-day jail terms by Judge William Ostler for two drinking-driving offences Dec. 6.

Monte Rae Preston, 675 Strandlund, had been accused of impaired driving in Central Saanich and driving while his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent in Colwood.

The union had threatened to strike if the company refused to fire Cutting for violating the union decision and for not paying the fine.

A union-lawyer said the PPWC was satisfied, however, with payment of the fine and is not considering any further action.

The bidding:

South West North East

4 NT Pass 7 NT Pass

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

South's opening four-no-trump bid resulted from a miscount of his hand. Technically this opening bid announces a hand of 28-30 high-card points (an extension) of the opening bid of three no-trump showing 25-27 high-card points. North, having 9 high-card points, plus a good five-card suit, figured that 13 tricks would be there for the taking. Hence his prompt lead to the grand slam.

As is evident, 13 tricks are there for the taking, thanks to either a successful finesse against East's king of clubs, or by the cashing of the three hearts, thereby making a winner out of dummy's fourth heart. But South, misled completely by West's opening lead, never gave even a passing thought to either of these two lines of play.

When West led the heart jack at trick one, declarer was certain of one thing: that West's heart suit was headed by the J-10, for no one ever leads an unsupported jack against a grand-slam contract. The jack of hearts was captured by South's queen, after which the king of hearts was cashed. Next came South's remaining heart, and when West followed with the three, dummy's nine was inserted, the finesse being taken against West's presumed ten. And so East's ten took the setting trick.

Had West chosen to make a more normal lead (let's say the fourth-from-the-highest, spade), South would have romped in with his contract. He first would have tested the hearts by cashing the king, queen and ace. Dummy's fourth heart, on this given day, would have become declarer's 13th trick. Had the hearts not been divided favorably, as a last resort, the club finesse would be taken.

NO CHARGE OVER DEATH

LONDON — Journalist Derek Humphry, who admitted helping his cancer-stricken wife to kill herself three years ago, will not be prosecuted, a spokesman for the director of public prosecutions said today.

He had faced a possible maximum prison sentence of 14 years for assisting in his wife's suicide, but the spokesman said there was insufficient evidence to justify prosecution.

Humphry, 47, said in a television program last March that he gave his terminally ill wife, Jean, a lethal dose of drugs in a cup of coffee.

On the program, he said his wife of 20 years chose the moment to die by saying "It's time you went and got me something to drink."

Demeter 'Abusing Process Of Courts'

KINGSTON, Ont. — An insurance company lawyer said Monday that Peter Demeter is abusing the process of the courts with his repetitive and irrelevant cross-examination of the man whose testimony was instrumental in Demeter's conviction.

"You've covered this ground time and time again," Brian Edwards said as Demeter resumed questioning of his former friend Csaba Szilagyi, 38.

Szilagyi has testified that for five years he and Demeter discussed plots to kill Demeter's wife, Christine, a former European fashion model.

Demeter, 45, who was found guilty of arranging the murder of his wife — whose body was found in the garage of their Mississauga, Ont., home July 18, 1973 — has served four years of a life sentence at Millhaven penitentiary.

Demeter is conducting the pre-trial hearing for a civil suit against three insurance companies for the $1-million life insurance policy he held on his wife.

The inquiry is being held to permit Demeter to cross examine Szilagyi until now for use at the civil trial because Demeter believes his former friend might leave the country and not be available later.

Demeter said he was going to continue his questioning of Szilagyi until a court orders him to stop, "because I am in prison for life; the issues are not just money."

The hearing, being conducted in a Millhaven guards' hut, continues.

Fish Rights Policy Must Change: Group

government can withdraw the bylaw."

Otway said the current dispute with some Fraser River Indian bands over food fishing must "be settled once and for all".

Claims by some bands that they are being harassed by federal fisheries enforcement officers and being made the "scapegoats" for poor salmon management are both incorrect and misleading, he said.

"Along with the Indians, we admit there are management problems and these are a common problem for the Indians, commercial fisherman and sports fisherman and should not be confused with the native food fishery," said Otway.

"The resources of Canada don't belong to any one group. If we start allocating them to people based on their date of entry into Canada it will be pretty hard on the last guys in."

Otway said there are 91 Indian bands on the Fraser's salmon rivers system. If they all end up with the same rights as the Squamish band and abuse those rights, he said, the resource will disappear.

"We do not consider as reasonable a food fishery that licences 2,500 intercepting nets between Mission and Kamloops on the Fraser-Tompson system."

Otway said fisheries officers pick up more than 250 illegal nets each year.

In 1973, about 22 per cent of all prosecutions in B.C. on fisheries-related charges were against Indians, but this figure dropped to 12.6 per cent in 1975 and to 9.2 per cent in 1976, he said.

"But over the same five-year period, Indian participation in fishing tripled. To say that they are suffering or are being harassed is wrong."

Otway said a poacher can net up to $40,000 a year selling fish to non-Indian distributors and "these distributors can earn upwards of $60,000 per year taking fish to markets as far removed as Winnipeg to the east and California to the south."

NEW RADIO LINK

PRETORIA (AP) — Defense headquarters has announced the creation of a military radio system to link security forces in areas of white-ruled South Africa bordering black states that harbor nationalist guerrillas.

The system is to be completed by March, 1979, in the northern and western Transvaal, Natal and the northwest Cape Province — all of which touch on either Mozambique or Botswana.

"We have uncovered an important drug route of great significance to this country, but we have hundred of miles of similar, isolated coastline and we are well aware that there could be other routes involved," he said.

Police are still searching for the two ships trapped in Saturday's dawn raid conducted by 50 RCMP officers with assistance from 500 Armed Forces personnel.

STAFF CHANGES SPARK PROTEST

Four groups involved in the B.C. fishing industry have sent a message to Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc, expressing their concern at personnel changes in the federal fisheries department in charge of the industry.

Representatives of the Pacific Gillnetters Association, the Pacific Trollers Association, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the Central Native Fisheries Co-Operative signed the message, asking LeBlanc if he was aware of the changes and unrest in the department's Pacific region.

They also asked whether the changes indicate there is a move to shift the base of fisheries management to Ottawa from Vancouver.

The message followed recent disclosures that Dick Croutier has been removed from his job as acting field services director, that management biologist Sand Argus has quit in protest and that several other senior persons have quit, taken leaves of absence or are looking for other jobs.

Tennis Centre Bid Set

Saanich council Monday night awarded a Vancouver company the contract for building the municipality's four-court indoor tennis centre adjacent to the Cedar Hill Community Centre.

Davis Foundation Spray Company, the lowest of five bidders for the project, will build an air-support structure for $235,000.

Financial projections prepared by recreation director Bill Young indicate the capital cost will be liquidated through court rental revenue within five years.

There was only minimal debate before council put its final seal of approval on what had been a controversial proposal.

But Mayor Mel Couveller took the opportunity to defend the decision to send four municipal representatives — two aldermen and two officials — on a $2,500 tour of tennis structures in Canada and the U.S.

Responding to criticism of the trip by the public and the news media, he said a council proposing to spend a quarter of a million dollars on a major recreational facility it should be allowed to conduct the necessary research without suffering potshots from "sharpshooters in the weeds."

Weldwood Profit Doubles

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. doubled its profits to $12,650,000 in the first six months of this year from $6,266,000 in the same period last year.

The company announced earnings rose to $2.56 a share from $1.25, while revenues were $226,930,000 compared to $186,425,000.

In the second quarter alone, Weldwood's profit increased to $8,160,000 or $1.66 a share compared with $3,615,000 or 72 cents a share in the same quarter last year. Second quarter revenues were $122,100,000 compared to $103,040,000.

Weldwood attributed the sharp increase to a strengthening of plywood prices in the second quarter.

Festival Off to Fine Start

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There is such a thing as anticipating an event too keenly so that the actual experience, by contrast, seems to fall short.

Those of us with still warm memories of last summer's great performances in the Victoria International Festival, have been indulging in that kind of anticipation.

Now the first two of the series that will spread itself over the ensuing six weeks, have come and gone — Sunday at the McPherson Playhouse was the official send-off — and there was definitely no let-down.

It appeared that the festival which will present a cluster of world-renowned artists is off to a fine start.

One of the features that makes this festival different and for many listeners even more enjoyable than other fine music events, is the fact that each concert program offers more than one soloist or ensemble.

Tonight's concert at the McPherson will feature one of the leading clarinetists of his time, Gervase de Peyer, with Canadian pianist William Aide, charming and gifted American pianist Robin McCabe (playing Ravel's Le Miroir) and Trio Victoria in the Mendelssohn Trio in D minor.

The opening concert Sunday began with a powerful but dynamically disciplined performance by distinguished American pianist.

unanimity of musical insight, brought ecstatic bravos from the audience.

Lovely clear, limpid tone, marvelous command of color, a vibrant, frequently dazzling technique marked the group's performance of the Beethoven Op. 38, No. 2.

He followed in response to an insistent recall, with a mood-filled tonally exquisite performance of Ravel's Ondine. Simon will be heard again on several occasions throughout the six weeks.

Two short Beethoven Romances — in G Major and F Major — while they did not display the full range of Russian-Canadian violinist Yuri Mazurkevich's impressive mastery of the instrument so much in evidence last summer, were nevertheless played with supreme taste, revealing a tone so pure and rich and so sensitive a musical awareness that one looks happily forward to his further appearances in the festival.

William Aide was his accompanist in the piano arrangement of the orchestral part.

The evening was crowned with the appearance of the Philadelphia String Quartet, a superb ensemble whose exquisite precision, fluency and next Sunday and will also be appearing at concerts at St. Michael's University School in the third, fifth and sixth weeks.

Thursday's program at St. Michael's will feature Peyer with Aide, cellist Haku Mori with Robin McCabe and Ruggiero Ricci with McCabe in an all-Brahms concert.

More information can be obtained on all these events by picking up a brochure at McPherson Playhouse or the Hillside Mall ticket centre.

HE SWITCHED

... and Indian Art is the Big Winner

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Three years ago Victor Newman injured his back wheeling cement at a construction site in Victoria. Unable to return to hard physical labor, he switched to carving.

It was a lucky break for Indian art in B.C.

For Newman, 41, is fast emerging as one of B.C.'s top Kwakiutl artists.

Earlier this month he received the top awards in the first-ever Indian Arts and Crafts Society of B.C. trade show in Vancouver.

He won first place for best overall display booth; first for wood carving — a native grease bowl in the design of a killer whale carved out of yellow cedar — and first prize for a mask carved out of birch.

Married with two small children, Newman comes by his talents naturally.

His grandfather was Charlie James — Yaakutlas, as he was called by Indians — one of the most famous of all Kwakiutl artists. His aunt was Ellen Neel, who gained international renown for her totem pole carvings before she died in 1958. Two of her poles are in Vancouver's Stanley Park.

Newman's father was also a carver but because he had a large family to support spent most of his time fishing. He died in 1956.

First Prizes
Coming Fast
To Talented
Sooke Carver

Newman started carving when he was a lad growing up in Port Hardy but quit when he went out to work in logging camps and construction sites on Vancouver Island.

After his back injury, doctors told him to change his occupation.

He went to K'san, an Indian art training centre near Hazelton, and completed a five-month course.

For the past three years he's worked out of his home at 1971 Kaltaslin Road in Sooke, carving spoons, masks, rattles and small totem poles on which he paints traditional Kwakiutl motifs.

It takes him a day to complete a totem pole which sells for about $15. Rattles take two weeks and masks one. They fetch about $150 and $175 respectively.

He does some consignment work — charging a flat $6 an hour.

He hasn't yet tackled any large works but that, he says, will come in time.

Few of his carvings and paintings have ended up in local stores. The competition, he says, is just too heavy. There are at least a dozen Indian artists in the city.

Consequently, he relies on arts and crafts trade shows, like the recent one in Vancouver, to generate sales.

He'll have a display at the craft show planned for the MacPherson this July 27-29. And he'll be pushing his wares at another show in Nelson next month.

TOWN TALK

Ron Godden of the B.C. Maritime Museum tells of one naval action on B.C.'s west coast during the Second World War that for obvious security reasons was never publicly aired during the war years.

His source of information is Cmdr. G. Barkley Barnes, RCN Rtd.

During a coastal patrol an armed landing party was sent ashore at Naden Harbor in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Members opened fire when they spotted a deer. Then came a big explosion. They had blown up the whaling station's powder house.

The incident was noted in HMCS Armentier's report of proceedings.

Budding scientist Alexandra Rieche, 15, has just returned from a week-long trip to southern California where she was the guest of Rockwell International, the giant U.S. company involved in developing the space shuttle program.

Alexandra, who will enter Grade 10 at Arbutus Junior Secondary next September, was one of three young Canadians awarded the trip for winning gold medals in their divisions at the Canadian National Science Fair held in Sudbury last May.

For thrills of a different kind, Rockwell escorted the trio through Disneyland, Beverly Hills and Universal Studios where they met Shawn Cassidy and Parker Stevenson on the set preparing for an episode in the TV series, The Hardy Boys.

Next month another science fair winner, Tybrin Hemphill, a Grade 9 student at Glenlyon, will travel to Ottawa where he will be the guest of Bell-Northern for a three-day stay, including a tour of the company's research laboratory north of the city.

That's an anonymous-looking ghost car Victoria city police have on the road. Suitably silver-grey and without the usual telltale radio aerial to give the game away, it was spotted at Cook and View Streets the other night after pulling over an unsuspecting motorist. Watch out for licence number SBW 691.

Canada's Young Career Woman of 1978 is Victoria's Shainaz Damji.

Shainaz was chosen at the national convention of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Moncton, N.B.

She works in the provincial economic development ministry.

Moped, the motorized bicycle, strikes again. Denis Boyle, 55, arrived in Victoria last week after driving (riding?) a total of 5,440 kilometres. Boyle left the Aix Noix, Que., south of Montreal, on June 15 and said his trip was great.

A call for car dealers to get involved in politics may have relevance elsewhere in Canada, but in B.C. it seems to be rather unnecessary advice.

Maurice C. Carter, president of the 110,000-member Federation of Automobile Car Dealers of Canada, recently told a convention of Newfoundland auto dealers that the only solution to Canada's current political mess is for people with business experience to run for public office at all levels of government.

Ah, how true. One has only to look at B.C.'s clutch (crank-case gas tank) of car dealers and ex-dealers in the government and cabinet to appreciate their invaluable contribution to the super-efficient, progressive and altogether lawless administration of this province's affairs.

Housing Halt Ordered

Central Saanich council has imposed a 60-day moratorium on new house construction on small lots in the Brentwood area.

The action was taken Monday night after about 100 residents appeared before council to protest an 11-unit low cost housing development being built on Slugget.

The residents, led by Gordon Rose, 960 Slugget, handed over a petition signed by 22 persons objecting to the development on the grounds it would devalue properties in the area and destroy the quality and esthetic value of the community.

Mayor Jean Butler said today there is nothing council can do about the development, financed through the federal Assisted Home Ownership Plan (AHOP).

Under the plan the builder must sell the houses for $45,000 or less.

She said no one on council was aware the subdivision plan included low-cost housing until the matter came up Monday night.

"Really, it's none of our business where a person gets his financing."

The subdivision plan, originally submitted by Larry Flannigan, conformed to the bylaws by providing 60-foot frontage for each lot, she said.

She said the building plans, tendered by contractor Tod Hackett, who purchased the property from Flannigan, were approved by the building inspector.

There is no onus on the building inspector to ask if the homes are AHOP financed, she added. "That wouldn't be his prerogative."

Butler said council is concerned about the problem of cheap housing in areas where quality homes are already in place and for that reason has referred the matter to the Advisory Planning Commission for study.

"We recognize an alteration in the economic conditions is forcing changes in the type of homes being built today," she said.

Council Warning

The owner of a Saanich home that has remained in a derelict condition since being damaged in a $20,000 fire in October 1977, will be warned that the municipality intends to demolish the building and send him the bill for the cost. But council agreed Monday night that Balbir Ghag, the owner of the home at 371 Ker, should have an opportunity to be heard before Saanich proceeds with demolition.

$3M Industry Profit if Hurdles Cleared

If several major obstacles are cleared between now and November and a number of other "assumptions" are realized, Saanich will have an industrial reserve estimated to earn the municipality a profit of more than $3 million over the next six years.

He stressed that while an impact study is being prepared over the summer and fall, Saanich has committed money "up front" but has secured options. The total purchase price is close to $900,000.

In the case of the 34.8 privately owned acres on the west side of the road — in volving 13 parcels of two to three acres and six owners — the option price is $583,000 and the options expire Oct. 10.

The intention is to develop the varied terrain of this site into benches suitable for storing the heavy industrial equipment which is now scattered across Saanich in several locations, including the Blenkinsop Valley.

Election Policy Changes Eyed

Two proposals for significant changes to Saanich election policies came before council Monday night, but both were held over until a September committee meeting to allow maximum discussion once holidays are out of the way.

One proposal sponsored by aldermen opposed the other's ideas.

Paterson said Cameron's suggested spending curbs of $5,000 for mayoralty and $2,500 for aldermanic candidates — would be ultra vires and an infringement on human rights.

If the bylaw were challenged in the courts, he said, it could be financially embarrassing for Saanich.

Cameron said holding elections every two years initially might generate a higher turnout at the polls, as Paterson claimed, but experience elsewhere showed the turnout would then drop to its previous levels.

He also predicted there would be more candidates running for office, and the competition for limited time on public platforms would reduce even the present minimal exposure.

Couvelier told council he supports the intent of the proposed election expenses bylaw whose purpose is to ensure that "elections cannot be bought."

Job to Private Firm

After submitting a bid for one of its own water main installation jobs, Saanich has awarded the contract to a private firm.

Council agreed Monday night that the contract for installing a water main on Arbutus Road should go to a newly-formed company, Circle 6, which had submitted a bid of $67,876 — more than $15,000 lower than the next lowest figure of $82,921 tendered by Saanich itself.

Saanich could have carried out the work with its own crews without going the tender route, but the project qualifies for a federal grant and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation requires tenders to be called for all such projects.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said last week that contractors were upset with Saanich for competing against private industry, but the mayor called the action highly defensible.

In other business Monday, council authorized a municipally-initiated local improvement scheme to install street lights on Arbutus between Gordon Head Road and Lexington Avenue.

The proposal must be supported by at least 50 per cent of area residents if it is to proceed.

Greater Victoria's Economic Development Commission

Greater Victoria's economic development commission, Barry Mayhew, told the meeting land sold at that price would be attractive to industry and would enhance his efforts to attract new business to the area.

Among the legislative steps required in the detailed timetable are amendments to several municipal bylaws as well as the official regional plan, and agreement from the B.C. Land Commission to release part of the Interurban land which is now included in the agricultural land reserve.

Deputy municipal planner Alan Hopper said the impact study to be prepared by staff will include numerous assessments, including the impact of the industrial park on the surrounding rural area, the flood plain and the environment in general; its traffic implications and the effect on the tax base.

Couvelier said no commitment to proceed with the project will be made until after the study's findings are completed.

The timetable calls for a public hearing by mid-September and final readings to the appropriate bylaws by Nov. 8.

If you or somebody in your family is on a special diet, you will probably find the Cholesterol, Calorie and Sodium Computer immensely helpful. It offers nutritional information on over 150 commonly used foodstuffs and beverages, even candy.

The computer will help you prepare nutritious, appetizing meals even if you or a family member has to stick to a calorie, cholesterol and/or sodium restricted diet.

Sodium values per serving are given in milligrams. As the sodium value in processed food can vary, depending on the amount of salt added in their preparation the value shown by the computer is mostly for foods in which salt has not been added.

The computer shows you at a glance, for instance, that a 4 oz. serving of roast beef yields 250 calories, that the cholesterol is medium and that it contains 75 mg of sodium. You will also see, for example, that a cup of corn flakes yields 100 calories, does not contain any cholesterol, but does contain 165 mg of sodium.

Can you settle this argument for us? Is it proper to send bridal shower invitations to people you know can't possibly attend?

DEAR ABBY: Recently I received an invitation to a bridal shower that was to take place four days after the invitation had been mailed. I hardly knew the bride-to-be, and besides, the shower was being held in a city over 350 miles away. To me, it was a blatant request for a gift, since it was obvious that I couldn't possibly attend. Feeling as I did, I didn't respond (even though the invitation was R.S.V.P.), nor did I send a gift.

Later, my mother said I showed poor manners by not sending a gift, and she felt I certainly should have responded to R.S.V.P. I say one ever expected me to come, and they showed poor manners by even sending me the invitation under those circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 20 years, and our problem is our sex life. What's a "turn on" for him is definitely a "turn off" for me. He insists on talking about other women when he's making love. I'm hurt because it's never ME he's making love to — it's always a friend, or a stranger, or a movie actress.

I don't want anyone else, and never have. Oh, sure, I've wondered what it would be like with Burt Reynolds, but what woman hasn't? I could never talk about other men during lovemaking. My husband says fantasizing would help us both, and there is nothing wrong with it. Is he right, or am I?

DEAR ABBY: Recently I received an invitation to a bridal shower that was to take place four days after the invitation had been mailed. I hardly knew the bride-to-be, and besides, the shower was being held in a city over 350 miles away. To me, it was a blatant request for a gift, since it was obvious that I couldn't possibly attend. Feeling as I did, I didn't respond (even though the invitation was R.S.V.P.), nor did I send a gift.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are ordinary people (now retired). We're trying to get along on Social Security, so we must draw on our savings, which of course are limited.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are ordinary people (now retired). We're trying to get along on Social Security, so we must draw on our savings, which of course are limited.

DEAR MR. VICHET: I have four children, all adults and married with children of their own, up to college age.

DEAR TURNED OFF: To help time to time, in order to help them out, we lend our children money, interest-free. They promised to pay us back in installments. After two or three installments, they quit paying, although they seem to have money for pleasure trips, expensive luxuries, etc.

DEAR FORGOTTEN: Since sex is your problem, I suggest that you consult a qualified sex therapist (they usually work in teams, a man and a woman to counsel the couple). Most universities now have a human sexuality program in their medical schools. Or perhaps your physician or clergyman can recommend a therapist.

DEAR UNDER FIRE: Your mother is half right. You showed poor manners in not responding to the R.S.V.P. However, a gift is always optional under these circumstances. No one is required to give one.

DEAR ABBY: Do you believe in love at first sight? — RHONDA

DEAR RHONDA: No. But I believe in taking a second look!

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are ordinary people (now retired). We're trying to get along on Social Security, so we must draw on our savings, which of course are limited.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am an 18-year-old male high school student. Although not extremely attractive, I do not consider myself to be the ugliest person in the world.

At the moment it is relatively difficult to date because I work in a hotel Friday and Saturday nights. I can talk freely and easily with girls and a lot of them consider me to be their friend.

My problem is this: Whenever I get up enough guts to ask someone out, I invariably get turned down. The result is that I have dated only about three girls and the farthest we have ever gone is heavy necking. At the present time I have not dated anyone in about nine months.

What can I do to change this situation?

I have thought of suicide but I do not want to take the easy way out.

ANSWER: It does not sound as though your mother is being of much help. Perhaps her loyalties are divided and she does not know how to deal with her husband's alcoholism.

There is a special organization for families of alcoholics called Al-Anon. People there can help you and your mother face reality about this man.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am so embarrassed. Even though I have quite a hairy chest, I could still wear a bra. I am not overweight and have been exercising regularly for several months.

All this was to firm up the rest of my body making my chest even more grotesque.

Do I have a medical problem and can something be done about it?

ANSWER: From your description alone I cannot tell if you have a medical problem. The only one who can tell you that is a doctor at the time of a physical examination.

I do not have any idea of your age from your letter. Some boys do develop enlargement of their breasts about the time of puberty. This can be of great concern and embarrassment but disappears very soon. It is a normal part of the development around the age of 15 or 16.

UVic Course Started Trail To China

In recent years Mary V. Stark has become a serious student of anthropology.

During her early married life, with three sons and a busy osteopathic physician husband, Dr. Robert Stark, she had little time for study.

About 10 years ago, however, still with a busy husband, but with sons growing into manhood, she registered at University of Victoria and, in 1974, received her BA degree in the faculty of anthropology and sociology.

Next came a stint of commuting back and forth to University of British Columbia, where, at the end of two years, she won her Master's degree in the faculty of anthropology and sociology.

An abstract of her thesis, The Beginning of Bronze Technology in East Asia, has since appeared in a learned publication titled Early China, printed in the United States.

About six months ago she was asked by the editors of Current Anthropology, a world journal published by the University of Chicago Press, to write a comment on a paper, The Balance of Trade in Southwest Asia in the Mid-Third Millennium BC.

She explains: "The policy of this journal, after it accepts a paper for publication, is to send it out to 50 commentators, selected internationally."

"Their comments are then used as the basis for scholarly debate."

Academic growth, coupled with a continuing interest in the science of man — with special emphasis on China — prompted Mrs. Stark to join a recent Thos. Cook guided tour of that country.

"Not that I intended to do any in-depth study," she told me. "Rather I hoped to see something of the country, meet the people and find out how they lived."

And that is exactly what she did.

The party of 99 persons were met at the border by Mrs. Feng, representative of Luxingshe, the Chinese International Travel Service.

She was well-educated, spoke English perfectly, was married with a family, had her own apartment in Peking, and she accompanied the group throughout the tour.

In the next two weeks Mary Stark saw the countryside from trains and planes; spent time in Hangzhou, Peking, Canton and Shanghai; visited communes; schools; private living quarters; and an immense area of workers' residences.

She discovered she could go anywhere she wished, take any pictures she wanted, with the exception of military installations.

Middle schools (high schools to us) openly discussed the Gang of Four.

"In one we were told the Gang of Four caused great damage to education. Teachers were enemies and studies were useless."

"Now, under Chairman Hua, everything is gradually being put back in order."

Today, one of the main aims is to make education available to every child, starting with kindergarten and ending, for a select few, in university.

"Young people are sent from middle schools to work where it is believed they can do best for the state. And whatever that work is — business, university, in the factories or on the land — chances are they will be here for life."

Mary Stark and scroll she painted in Chinese tradition

Retirement comes to the majority at age 50, and to the intellectuals at age 55.

A bulging notebook that Mary Stark brought back is filled with interesting experiences, high among them her visit to that immense area of workers' residences.

"This is not a commune," she explains, "it is an area of 500,000 square metres, once used for growing vegetables, where there are now some 50,000 people living (1,500 families).

"There are middle and primary schools, kindergartens, a factory, hospital, theatre and a department store.

"The people there get medicare and sick leave and their rents are scaled to the size of their living quarters. There are grades of workers too, depending on age and experience."

Here a visit was made to the home of Mrs. Hsu Ho Ying — "three rooms, built in 1960 and housing seven of a family."

Five of the seven work and between them they earn 350 yuan a month.

The rent is 14 yuan a month — about nine dollars in our money. Four yuan goes for gas, two for light and a little over three for water.

Even so, families like this manage to put "perhaps 50 yuan a month into the bank" and the interest on that allows them to buy radios, bicycles, TV sets and some other luxuries.

Wherever Mrs. Stark went she saw women working. At the Peking Arts and Crafts Factory alone there were 1,300 workers and perhaps 50 per cent were female."

Despite recent reports that they are adopting western dress all the women she met were still wearing pants and high-necked jackets.

"Only western dresses I saw were a white dress and jackets worn by a young announcer at the Shanghai Philharmonic concert, and the trim skirts and jackets of girl students who performed for us in the schools and on the little ones in the kindergartens."

"Young people are sent from middle schools to work where it is believed they can do best for the state. And whatever that work is — business, university, in the factories or on the land — chances are they will be here for life."

KIDNAP CHARGE BANDIED

MONTREAL (CP) — A special Canadian envoy is on his way back from Algiers after a round of talks with Algerian government officials about allegations that Dallia Maschino was kidnapped from her French husband here last April, says an external affairs department spokesman.

George Blouin, assistant undersecretary of state, met Saturday with Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika, a week after his arrival in Algiers. The meeting was delayed because Bouteflika was in Paris for most of last week.

They discussed the Maschino affair along with the "overall framework of bilateral relations" between the countries but the two sets of issues have not been linked, the spokesman said in a telephone interview Monday from Ottawa.

The meeting was held in "a cordial atmosphere," he added, declining to discuss its results.

Dallia, 26, an Algerian citizen, was allegedly drugged and whisked home on a private jet on the night of April 24-25. Denis Maschino, 26, a Frenchman living and studying here, says she is being held incommunicado by her older brother, Messaoud Zeghab, a wealthy businessman with links to Algerian President Houari Boumedienne.

The Canadian ambassador in Algiers filed a note of protest July 3 but Algeria's replied that its position was that the affair is a family matter. After an apparent stalemate, Blouin was dispatched there July 8 to seek a compromise.

The next step is for Blouin to report to External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson, who is due back in Ottawa this weekend from an international economic conference in Bonn.

The spokesman would not comment on whether Blouin and Bouteflika had found grounds for a settlement or a meeting between Dallia, Canadian officials and, perhaps, Maschino.

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Chief Supt. Donald Cobb said Monday the government was forced into calling a royal commission into the RCMP a year ago.

The comment came as he was questioned by the royal commission about alleged acts of arson, theft and kidnapping by the anti-terrorist unit he led in Montreal in the early 1970s.

Cobb said that if such acts had come to the attention of governments in England or Israel, they would never have gone beyond the bureaucracy.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, commission chairman, asked whether Cobb was saying the government should have ignored the RCMP commissioner's recommendation a year ago that a royal commission be established to get to the bottom of the allegations.

Cobb replied that the government had no choice. The person making the allegations had said: "You will act on (them) or I will go to the newspapers."

He did not identify the person.

Cobb said the security service acted "on the edge of the law" and he had to count on the loyalty of his colleagues to prevent the entire service from being jeopardized by publicity.

This had gone down the drain with public disclosure in 1976 that his G-4 unit had broken into the offices of a Montreal news agency in 1972, and "subsequent disclosure of all the cases before this commission...."

RCMP Constable Robert Samson, facing trial in 1976 on another charge, blurted that he had "done worse things" and gave details of the news agency raid. Samson had been with the G-4 unit during the raid.

Young Rose Brother Wins Parole After 5 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Rose, convicted in 1973 as an accessory in the 1970 kidnapping of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, headed for a cottage in the Gaspe Monday after being released from penitentiary on parole.

One of the conditions of Rose's release from the Laval Institute — where he had served four years and two months of an eight-year sentence — was that he remain in the Montreal area.

But his parole supervisor, Pierre Saulnier, gave him special permission to travel to the Gaspe with lawyer Robert Lemieux, who represented not only Rose but most of the others accused during the October Crisis.

Laporte was murdered Oct. 17, 1970, seven days after being kidnapped from his home by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Rose, 31, served the time for helping his elder brother Paul avoid arrest in the affair.

Paul Rose, serving two concurrent life sentences for Laporte's kidnapping and murder, is not eligible for parole until December, 1980.

After his release, the younger Rose told reporters he was going to work for a committee whose aim is to free Paul and other FLQ prisoners.

Asked if his political views had changed, he said: "No, not at all. I'm still a good independent."

Parole board officials said Rose will live in downtown Montreal and begin work at a Montreal-area food co-operative within a month.

He first became eligible for day parole — which would have allowed him to work during the day and return to prison at night — 16 months ago, but the parole board turned down his bid then.

On Monday, lawyer Lemieux repeated the often-heard charge that Rose would have been released 16 months ago if he had not been associated with the FLQ.

Rose's parole expires in July, 1982.

Rose was the second person convicted in connection with the Laporte affair to be released this week.

On Sunday, Bernard Lortie, sentenced in November, 1971, to 20 years and 11 months on a kidnapping charge, was paroled without fanfare.

Parole board official Stephen Cummins said Lortie had been quietly granted day parole privileges six months ago.

Francis Simard, sentenced to life for non-capital murder in the Laporte case, has been granted the right to 72-hour passes every three months for the next nine months.

Like Paul Rose, Simard is eligible for full parole in December, 1980.

The parole board also said Monday that Francois Schirrm, sentenced to life in prison in 1964 for the fatal shooting of Leslie MacWilliams during an FLQ-related raid on a Montreal firearms store, has been granted day parole on a probationary basis.

Prison Hose Too Short, Inquest Told

Wilkinson Road guards grabbed a fire hose too short to reach a fire in a mattress in a cell which 20-year-old inmate John Richard Marlow had set ablaze early June 4, a coroner's jury was told Monday.

Inmate Richard Alexander, who occupied a cell near Marlow, said guards took a hose from a tier above, and when they turned it on a wide spray of water came out which was not adequate to reach the cell.

He and another inmate John George Auxi testified it was buckets of water thrown on the fire by inmates that doused the flames, not the water from the hose.

Guards told the jury the hose from the tier above was taken because it had already been unlocked to remove a fire extinguisher. The hose on the bottom tier, where Marlow was in Cell 10, was still locked and would have taken time to remove from the cabinet.

However, Alexander said, the hose only reached Cell 7.

Both Auxi and Alexander suffered minor burns to their hands in fighting through the tangle of sheets, bedspring wires, and strips of blanket Marlow had wound around the door of his cell.

Auxi said the fire was so intense the paint on the walls of the cell blazed like gasoline.

He said Marlow, who died in Victoria General Hospital's burn unit July 2, didn't really want to kill himself.

He said Marlow acted normally and got along well with other inmates, although he seemed to be under a great deal of pressure, because of a deteriorating relationship with his common-law wife, the prospect of a long jail sentence stemming from his involvement in a fire at Jordan River in May and restrictions on his visiting privileges.

Last week, a psychiatrist's report indicated Marlow was suicidal, and an ambulance driver said Marlow had expressed a wish to die as he was being taken to hospital.

Evidence so far in the inquest showed Marlow barricaded himself in his cell the night of June 3 and slashed his arms with a razor. Guards treated the wounds, which were not serious, and about two hours later saw smoke and fire coming from his cell.

Several inmates testified Monday that Marlow told them to stay awake in case something happened when he returned to his cell following the first incident.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Aug. 10.

Young Still Talking

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young Monday defended his controversial comments about political prisoners in the United States and said he will continue to speak out on the issue.

Young told an interviewer from the International Herald Tribune he accepted his rebuke by President Carter, however, and said his comments, which made headlines around the world last week, were an "overstatement."

The United Nations ambassador originally told another Paris newspaper there are "hundreds, even thousands" of political prisoners in the United States. He brought up the issue in a comment about dissident trials in the Soviet Union.

Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance both were angered by Young's statements, and more than 90 members of Congress supported a resolution calling for his impeachment. The president telephoned Young Saturday to reprimand him.

"I accepted the rebuke," Young told the International Herald Tribune in Geneva, where he is on U.N. business.

"The overstatement was there."

But, he added: "I didn't overstate the number of people. It was a casual statement."

Reversal Bid On Land Thaw

North Saanich will ask the B.C. Land Commission to reverse its recent decision removing about 16 acres in the municipality from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

The land in question was removed from the ALR after the land commission twice refused in 1976 and 1977.

Provincial soils expert Fred Reid was fired from his job for giving the press information on the removal of the land, owned by Donald and Jacqueline Wilson, of 9299 Canora Road.

The property adjoins 62 acres in Sidney removed from the ALR in January, including a 33-acre farm now proposed for a mobile home park.

Ald. Eric Sherwood, who submitted the motion to council requesting the commission to reconsider its de-

SAN MARINO OFFICIALLY COMMUNIST

SAN MARINO (Reuter) — The only Communist-led government in Western Europe took office Monday to rule San Marino, one of the world's smallest states.

A Communist-led leftist coalition narrowly won a confidence vote in the Grand and General Council—the San Marino parliament—to take office Monday and end 20 years of Christian Democratic government.

An election last month gave the Communists 18 seats in the 60-place assembly. They are backed by the 15 votes of the Socialist and Unitary Socialist parties.

San Marino's economy is based on tourism and the issuing of postage stamps. But it also receives more than $3 million a year from Italy in return for not becoming a tax or gambling haven.

ALL-AMERICAN birthday present, a Postal Service lobby poster showing the George M. Cohan commemorative stamp, is given to actor Jimmy Cagney on his 75th birthday Monday by U.S. Northeast Regional Postmaster General Frank Sommerkamp. Cagney portrayed the bumptious song-and-dance man in several movies. The presentation was made at Cagney's home on Martha's Vineyard.

GENOCIDE CHARGED

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Indians are demanding the U.S. government stop what they describe as a policy of genocide, saying that one out of every four Indian women was "forcibly sterilized" from 1971 to 1975.

The Indians were to continue their lobbying of various parts of the federal government today, including a protest at the Supreme Court building, after about 1,000 of them marched on the Capitol on Monday.

"Genocide has to come to an end; sterilization must stop," shouted Philip Deer, a leader of the Muscogee Nation as he spoke at a rally on Capitol Hill Monday.

The Indians, many of whom marched to Washington, also are asking Congress not to approve pending legislation that they say will take away their lands and deprive them of control over their culture, education and destinies.

Indians from more than 80 tribes have joined in the demonstrations that follow the "longest walk" — a 4,800-kilometre protest march from California to Washington.

The tribes say 24 per cent of all Indian women in the U.S. were "forcibly sterilized" from 1971 to 1975 and one out of three Indian children today are being placed in non-Indian homes by agencies.

Munroe Named New LRB Head

Lawyer Donald Munroe of Vancouver has been appointed chairman of the Labor Relations Board, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Monday.

Munroe, who has been vice-chairman of the board since 1976, succeeds Paul Weiler, who is retiring to take a position with Harvard University.

Munroe, who has acted as an arbitrator in various labor disputes in the province, will take over his new position on Oct. 2, and will serve as the acting chairman when Weiler leaves at the end of this month.

Weiler has been the only chairman of the board since it was set up under the former NDP government in 1973.

The board handles about 4,000 proceedings a year dealing with a variety of labor relations matters. The board also acts as the appeal tribunal dealing with awards of labor arbitrators.

Protest 'Political'

Anti-uranium mining demonstrations by the residents of Genelle in southeastern B.C. are nothing but a socialist front, Mines Minister Jim Chabot said Monday.

Chabot said in an interview that he is forced to conclude that because the Genelle residents invite only NDP MLAs to the area to hear their complaints and not him, the whole protest is purely political.

The minister also rejected a call for a five-year moratorium on uranium mining in the province, saying it would be meaningless.

Tom Mackenzie, spokesman for the residents, told an NDP-sponsored meeting on Sunday that a moratorium is needed to study the uranium problem.

Mackenzie said exploration permits were let earlier by the inspector of mines in Nelson without adequate information being supplied on the permit form.

The residents want the uranium exploration in their area halted because of fears waste rock from drilling in the China Creek area near Castlegar will contaminate their water supply.

Chabot criticized the NDP for trying to score "political brownie points" with the people of B.C. by becoming involved in the controversy.

The minister said that during the last session of the legislature, the NDP did not raise the question of uranium mining once, and now the party is only jumping on a political bandwagon.

Council also said the services of municipal administrator Jim Craven should be extended to the regional board and he should attend all regional board public works committee meetings and play a direct role in negotiating a PCB permit.

And the municipality, through its consulting engineer Charles Bullock, threw in a new idea of building two outfall pipes at McMicking Point, one to handle normal flows and the other to act as an emergency overflow.

Fifty residents came to the council meeting which turned out to be calm and rational, in contrast to some previous clashes between Oak Bay and the regional board when, at one time, it was proposed to build a major pumphouse at Shoal Bay to send the sewage over Gonzales Hill to Clover Point.

Council reiterated its belief that the approach to sewage disposal which best combines aesthetic, environmental and economic aspects is for continuing discharge in the McMicking Point area. The regional district was asked to proceed with further studies and make whatever approaches are necessary to the Pollution Control Board.

He said it would be naive to say Oak Bay has the final answer without further design work and going to the PCB for approval.

would be about 40 feet square.

A consulting engineer for the regional district, Ray Le Noury, anticipated that a comminutor to break down the effluent will be required and a diffuser probably will be required. At some time pumps may have to be installed and he recommended that space be allocated for them. He said the building

He thought a reasonable place would be found but no one could be certain so he suggested the pipe be installed without a comminutor or diffuser and the results monitored. If problems arose, a comminutor or diffuser could be added.

He said the costs would range from $500,000 for a simple pipe to $3.16 million including $1.5 million for a pump.

Oak Bay Urges 2 Outfall Pipes

Oak Bay council asked the Capital Regional District board Monday night to conduct further studies on the feasibility of continuing sewage disposal at McMicking Point rather than an old plan of diverting the sewage to Shoal Bay to send the sewage over Gonzales Hill to Clover Point.

A 36-inch-diameter pipe could be built as an overflow for the rare occasions when flows are over 15 cubic feet per second. He said this would only happen at the most once or twice a year. A comminutor and diffuser should be included in the design.

The two-outfall approach would cost $900,000, he said, saving Oak Bay anywhere from $2 million to $8 million over other options.

INDIAN STRANGLEHOLD FEARED Fish Rights Give-Away Must Stop: Federation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation Bill Otway said the 25,000-member organization has launched a national campaign calling on Canadians to demand that the federal government stop "giving away" exclusive fishing rights to Indians.

Several Natives Charged

LILLOOET (CP) — Federal fisheries officers seized salmon Monday and laid charges against native Indians who defied a two-day fishing ban in effect because of low salmon counts.

Garnet Jones, fisheries division chief responsible for the Fraser river area, said Monday that at least six charges of illegal fishing or fishing without a permit were laid, and about 20 salmon were seized.

There was no violence, but Jones agreed it was a tense moment when his three officers confronted about 50 Indians. Some of the Indians stood by beating drums and chanting, while others shouted: "Shoot them, shoot them."

Chief Saul Terry of the Bridge River band said that permits allow fishing Monday through Thursday and that Indians had no intention of obeying the ban.

A special detachment of about 20 fisheries officers were sent here, about 200 kilometres northeast of Vancouver, when seven Indian bands in the area said they intended to ignore the ban. They said Indians should not suffer for what they have called bad fish management by white men.

Jones said the two-day closure is necessary to allow more salmon through to Stuart Lake and to northern Indians who only have the early sockeye to rely on for fish food. He estimated that only about half the needed 100,000 sockeye salmon have run through so far.

Otway told a press conference here Monday the campaign is aimed at Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner and Prime Minister Trudeau, who he said must withdraw and stop the spread of special fishing rights given last fall to the Squamish Indian band.

He said that "absolute authority has been granted the band for fisheries management at the mouths of the Capilano, Squamish and Seymour Rivers and already there is a band in Ontario that is after the same rights on reserve land."

The rights were passed by the Squamish band council last fall and made law under the Indian Act when approved by Faulkner on Nov. 2. The approval, Otway said, was made without the knowledge of federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc.

He said also that George Manuel, Union of B.C. Indian Chief president, "is now calling for all Indian bands to write their own bylaws to control the fisheries resource." If this is done and approval given by Ottawa "we will have given away the rights to a resource to a select few," he said.

Otway claimed that Indians fishing in the Fraser River may be taking more than 3.3 million kilograms (7,250,000 pounds) of salmon and trout annually.

He said a secret federal fisheries study estimates that about 300,000 salmon and approximately 2,500 steelhead were taken legally from the Fraser River system between Mission and Kamloops last year.

This works out to about 2.4 million pounds (1.1 million kilograms) or about 218 pounds for all Indian men, women and children in the area, he said.

"But considering that Indians refuse to tell fisheries how many fish they take or to let them observe fully netting operations, it is reasonable to assume the catch is at least triple the official count."

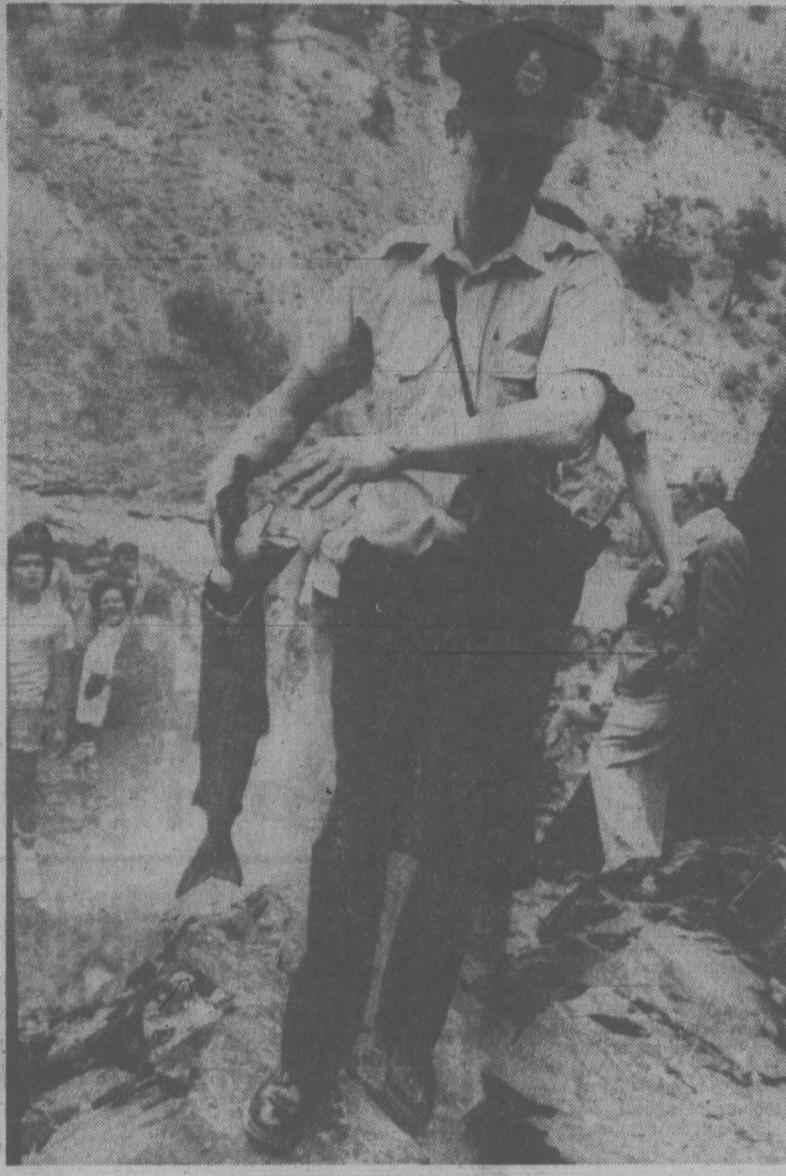

The federation released a news letter headlined "B.C. Fisheries Given Away," which he said now is in the mail to 150,000 homes and is to go eventually to 500,000 homes in this province. It also contains letters of complaint addressed to both Faulkner and Trudeau that the organization hopes people will sign and mail.

Otway predicted the campaign will be similar to the massive campaign launched two years ago that halted the federal government's special firearms bill.

If the Squamish rights are not withdrawn and the federal fisheries department does not launch a court case to determine who has jurisdiction over the salmon fishery, the federation "will probably have to do it," said Otway.

"But we can't see why there should be further waste of taxpayers money over a court case when the federal

New Mideast Talks Doomed to Failure?

Fish Talks Stalemated

Union and fishing company negotiators met for more than six hours Monday but failed to reach a solution to a dispute which has crippled the B.C. fishing industry at the height of the salmon season.

No further talks are scheduled between the 600 striking tendermen and the Fisheries Association of B.C., which bargains for 13,300 shoreworkers who walked off the job.

Following Monday's meeting a union spokesman said the companies changed their position on some money matters but held out for a one-year agreement which would include herring as well as salmon.

The fisherman who work on the fish packers want an agreement for handling salmon only and wish to bargain prior to the herring season for rates for handling the herring.

The fisheries association is opposed because the companies feel this will allow the workers to strike twice a year.

The tendermen have rejected a company offer of a $9-a-day increase and are holding out for $12.50 a day.

The shoreworkers have yet to vote on the company's latest offer of a wage increase of 70 cents an hour.

The shoreworkers' base rate now is $6.72 an hour and tendermen's wages are $9.3 a day.

LEEDS CASTLE (UPI) — Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers met for more than three hours today in this 1,000-year-old English castle in search of Middle East peace.

A statement by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, however, hinted at failure unless the Israelis come up with some new ideas.

A U.S. spokesman described the first 3½ hour session between Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Kamel as "serious and thorough." But the two ministers admitted they were still far apart, and not even certain these negotiations are "direct negotiations."

Both agreed that while the gap between Egypt and Israel on a peace settlement is wide, particularly on the future of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, there was some hope of narrowing it.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III said: "There was a serious and thorough discussion, with all parties working in a straightforward manner."

Before their meeting the Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers shook hands. The talks opened in this 1,000-year-old castle surrounded by a moat and standing on two islands in the middle of a lake. Police and troops sealed off the grounds.

"Do not know if the Israelis will walk out or not," he added. "What I know is that we have a specific plan

Smuggling Search Continuing

The processing of 15 men charged in Canada's biggest-ever marijuana seizure opened today in provincial court.

All 15 — arrested in a three-day raid near Tofino Saturday by a combined force of RCMP and armed forces personnel — are charged with conspiracy to import marijuana.

The arrests came after an estimated 16 tons of marijuana, valued on the underworld at about $20 million, was brought ashore at a secluded cove.

One of the men, Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto, asked his case be remanded.

Judge Fred Green put Kennedy over to July 27 for a bail hearing.

The processing of the other 14 accused was continuing.

21 Die in Heat

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Temperatures soared past 38 Celsius degrees Monday for the 16th day in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, causing the deaths of at least 21 persons, health officials said.

Three Central Saanich men are expected to appear in court later in the week charged with illegally importing the beer from the American Gulf Islands.

Their names are being withheld pending their appearance in court. All are believed to be in their mid-20s.

B.C. is well into the second month of the beer strike.

A Central Saanich police spokesman said the men apparently made three trips a day, bringing in 60 cases each time.

It is believed the men purchased the beer in Friday Harbor on San Juan and at Rosario on Orcas.

The three were nabbed at a police roadblock late Friday night. They were riding in a camper truck loaded with 120 cases of Schlitz and Olympia beer.

The arrests capped an eight-hour police stake-out at Island View Beach.

Police were tipped off to the operation by a nearby beach resident who grew suspicious at the number of fishing trips the trio had been making each day in their boat over the past week.

The resident reported the men were unloading a quantity of beer at the public boat ramp after each excursion and placing the cases in a truck.

Three Central Saanich policemen and two RCMP officers went to the beach at 2:30 p.m.

One hid in a beachfront residence with binoculars trained on each boat entering the ramp. Another posed as a fisherman.

They watched the trio make a drop and leave again for another trip. At 10 p.m., when they returned the officer posing as a fisherman helped the men pack the cases into their truck.

Police were waiting for them at a roadblock at Island View and Pat Bay.

Police recovered about 100 cases from the men's residences in Chemainus.

The beer? It will be destroyed, the spokesman said.

Staff Walkout Snags Sailing

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Ferry passengers faced waits of up to 4½ hours Monday after the crew of the Queen of Coquitlam walked off the job before the 2:30 p.m. sailing.

The 32 workers complained that the ferries are understaffed and overloaded and that the British Columbia Ferries Corp. is showing complete disregard for its employees.

"It's not a small dispute," he said. "It could domino into a full-scale strike."

He said the work stoppage was the culmination of months of frustration with management over staffing and safety issues and management's disregard for workers' complaints.

Pilots Cheer Terror Accord

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian airline pilots breathed sighs of relief Monday following an announcement that seven countries had agreed to tough new measures to combat hijackings.

Canada, the United States, Japan, France, Britain, West Germany and Italy, meeting to discuss economic issues in Bonn, have agreed to a proposal by Prime Minister Trudeau to cease all flights to and from countries that refuse to extradite or prosecute hijackers.

"Finally, it looks like they've been able to accomplish what everyone has been urging them to do for years," said Kenneth Maley, president of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association.

"For the first time, we can truly laud the government for the stand it has taken," he said. "It's exactly what we've been pushing for."

Maley said he expects other countries will follow.

Brook Stewart, an Air Canada spokesman, said: "I don't think it's up to us to be happy with it. It's a government problem."

The airline begins negotiations next month with 2,300 passenger and ticket agents, members of the Canadian Air Line Employees Association.

arriving at their destinations without their baggage.

"It can be a problem for us (connecting flights) if they're delayed inbound," he said. "They're getting their flights but their baggage won't make it. They get it on a later flight."

The machinists and ground workers staged several protests in Montreal last fall after the anti-inflation board chopped 2.1 per cent off a seven-per-cent wage increase in their last contract.

The threat of a machinists strike comes at a busy time for Air Canada's harassed labour-relations people, who also are negotiating with the company's 500 finance workers, 1,500 pilots and 2,700 flight attendants.

The airline begins negotiations next month with 2,300 passenger and ticket agents, members of the Canadian Air Line Employees Association.

Toronto Flights Still Snagged

LOOK WHO'S SMILING NOW

Times News Services

TORONTO — In an obvious imitation of B.C.'s Hon. Grace McCarthy, Ontario Industry and Tourism Minister John Rhodes has asked Ontario residents to do what probably comes least naturally to them—smile.

The minister's motives are purely commercial. He suggests this can help reduce the province's international deficit in tourism.

Last year foreign visitors to Ontario spent about $1.1 billion here, while Ontarians spent nearly $1.7 billion abroad. As recently as 1968, before Ontario residents discovered en masse the joys of winter in the sunshine of Florida and the Caribbean, Ontario had a surplus in foreign tourism.

THE OUTCASTS

2,4-D Dumped in Lake

VERNON (CP) — A demonstration by three environmental organizations on Kalamalka Lake at this Okanagan city delayed application of the herbicide 2,4-D into the lake by several hours Monday.

But by noon the provincial water investigations branch successfully completed the application after giving environmentalists the slip.

RCMP were called out to clear the way for environment ministry aquatic plant management staff to enter buildings where the 2,4-D and machinery were kept.

At noon, three hours behind schedule, about 30 pounds of pellets containing 20 per cent 2,4-D were dropped in about two metres of water at the north end of Kalamalka Lake, into spots totalling just under a quarter acre. The herbicide is being used to fight spreading Eurasian milfoil weed.

Police had escorted a truck carrying the boat used for application from the city sewage treatment plant and protesters tried to follow it but failed.

By the time the environmentalists got to the boat launching area, it was in the water and heading to the spot where the 2,4-D was to be applied.

The environmentalists regrouped and headed for the site where they launched their canoes but arrived just after the herbicide was applied and the boat headed back to nearby Oyama, where it is kept.

Members of the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition, Okanagan chapter of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society and Greenpeace organizations were protesting use of what they termed a dangerous herbicide in a public water supply.

W.A.C.
HOME AGAIN

KELOWNA (CP) — Former premier W. A. C. Bennett was discharged from hospital here Monday, a family spokesman said.

Bennett had entered hospital eight days earlier and underwent a series of tests for an undisclosed ailment.

The spokesman said Bennett was in good spirits and went for a walk outside earlier in the day.

She said the former premier still has further tests to undergo but will not have to spend time in the hospital.

Bennett recently suffered from viral pneumonia and before that suffered a mild heart attack.

Lindholm's Boat Arrives
With Jury Rig Mast

Louis Lindholm's Annie Cadby of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club went across the finish line about 8:30 p.m. Monday in the Victoria-Maui sailing classic.

The only Victoria boat in the race, she was dismasted last Tuesday. Lindholm and his crew made a jury rig which slowed her speed since the incident.

The race began July 1 and Annie Cadby had an elapsed time of 393.41 hours. Attempts now are being made to get a replacement for the lower part of her two-section mast.

The first boat to finish the race in division I, International Offshore Rule was Doug Fryer's Merling of the Seattle Yacht Club but Irving Loupe's Bravura of the Lahaina Yacht Club won on corrected time.

Carter Kerr's Nerita of the Corinthian Yacht Club in Seattle was first to finish and first on corrected time in division II. Sid Burgess' Sardiff was first to finish in division III but J. Garner's Ramrod of Portland's Corinthian Yacht Club is the probable winner.

Manhunt for 100

LISBON (UPI) — Armed villagers joined hundreds of police and Air Force helicopters north of Lisbon today in a spreading manhunt for more than 100 escaped prisoners who tunneled out of a maximum security prison.

Police spokesman said 42 of the 124 escapees from Alentejo prison 50 miles north of the capital had been recaptured.

Villagers in the wine-growing area joined in the search for those still remaining at large.

Police warned that some of the escapees could be considered "very dangerous."

Blaze Subdued

A forest fire that broke out in the Duncan area during the weekend has now been brought under control.

Meanwhile, hot dry weather conditions throughout most of B.C. are continuing to cause high to extreme fire hazard conditions in provincial forests.

Forester Allan Jenkins said Monday that more than 90 fires are still burning in B.C., 40 of which started during the weekend.

He said only one fire — a 3,000-acre blaze in the northwestern corner of the province near Atlin — is still burning out of control.

HE SWITCHED

... and Indian Art is the Big Winner

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Times Staff

Three years ago Victor Newman injured his back wheeling cement at a construction site in Victoria.

Unable to return to hard physical labor, he switched to carving.

It was a lucky break for Indian art in B.C.

For Newman, 41, is fast emerging as one of B.C.'s top Kwakiutl artists.

Earlier this month he received the top awards in the first-ever Indian Arts and Crafts Society of B.C. trade show in Vancouver.

He won first place for best over-all display booth; first for wood carving — a native grease bowl in the design of a killer whale carved out of yellow cedar — and first prize for a mask carved out of birch.

Marrried with two small children, Newman comes by his talents naturally.

His grandfather was Charlie James — Yaakutlas, as he was called by Indians — one of the most famous of all Kwakiutl artists. His aunt was Ellen Neel, who gained international renown for her totem pole carvings before she died in 1958. Two of her poles are in Vancouver's Stanley Park.

Newman's father was also a carver but because he had a large family to support spent most of his time fishing. He died in 1956.

Newman started carving when he was a lad growing up in Port Hardy but quit when he went out to work in logging camps and construction sites on Vancouver Island.

After his back injury, doctors told him to change his occupation.

He went to K'san, an Indian art training centre near Hazelton, and completed a five-month course.

For the past three years he's worked out of his home at 1971 Kaltasun Road in Sooke, carving spoons, masks, rattles and small totem poles on which he paints traditional Kwakiutl motifs.

It takes him a day to complete a totem pole which sells for about $15. Rattles take two weeks and masks one. They fetch about $150 and $175 respectively.

He does some consignment work — charging a flat $6 an hour.

He hasn't yet tackled any large works but that, he says, will come in time.

Few of his carvings and paintings have ended up in local stores. The competition, he says, is just too heavy. There are at least a dozen Indian artists in the city.

Consequently, he relies on arts and crafts trade shows, like the recent one in Vancouver, to generate sales.

He'll have a display at the craft show planned for the MacPherson this July 27-29. And he'll be pushing his wares at another show in Nelson next month.

More Area Jobs Cut UIC Payouts

Bon Godden of the B.C. Maritime Museum tells of one naval action on B.C.'s west coast during the Second World War that for obvious security reasons was never publicly aired during the war years.

His source of information is Cmdr. G. Barkley Barnes, RCN Rtd.

During a coastal patrol an armed landing party was sent ashore at Naden Harbor in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Members opened fire when they spotted a deer. Then came a big explosion. They had blown up the whaling station's powder house.

The incident was noted in HMCS Armentieres' report of proceedings.

Budding scientist Alexandra Rieche, 15, has just returned from a week-long trip to southern California where she was the guest of Rockwell International, the giant U.S. company involved in developing the space shuttle program.

Alexandra, who will enter Grade 10 at Arbutus Junior Secondary next September, was one of three young Canadians awarded the trip for winning gold medals in their divisions at the Canadian National Science Fair held in Sudbury last May.

For thrills of a different kind, Rockwell escorted the trio through Disneyland, Beverly Hills and Universal Studios where they met Shawn Cassidy and Parker Stevenson on the set preparing for an episode in the TV series, The Hardy Boys.

Next month another science fair winner, Tybring Hemphill, a Grade 9 student at Glenlyon, will travel to Ottawa where he will be the guest of Bell-Northern for a three-day stay, including a tour of the company's research laboratory north of the city.

That's an anonymous-looking ghost car Victoria city police have on the road. Suitably silver grey and without the usual telltale radio aerial to give the game away, it was spotted at Cook and View Streets the other night after pulling over an unsuspecting motorist. Watch out for licence number SBW 691.

Canada's Young Career Woman of 1978 is Victoria's Shainaz Damji.

Shainaz was chosen at the national convention of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Moncton, N.B.

She works in the provincial economic development ministry.

Moped, the motorized bicycle, strikes again. Denis Boyle, 55, arrived in Victoria last week after driving (riding?) a total of 5,440 kilometres.

Boyle left Fleauxnoix, Quebec, south of Montreal, on June 15 and said his trip was great.

A call for car dealers to get involved in politics may have relevance elsewhere in Canada, but in B.C. it seems to be rather unnecessary advice.

Maurice C. Carter, president of the 110,000-member Federation of Automobile Car Dealers of Canada, recently told a convention of Newfoundland auto dealers that the only solution to Canada's current political mess is for people with business experience to run for public office at all levels of government.

"Ah, how true." One has only to look at B.C.'s clutch (crank-case? gas tank?) of car dealers and ex-dealers in the government and cabinet to appreciate their invaluable contribution to the super-efficient, progressive and altogether flawless administration of this province's affairs.

Victoria employers listed 3,500 jobs through the local Canadian Employment Centre during the past three months, up 500 jobs from the same time last year, the centre said today.

"At this rate there will be 2,000 more jobs in Victoria this year than one year ago," centre assistant manager Doug Yearwood said.

"This is a big increase. This explains why our unemployment level has fallen to 6.4 per cent."

It was 8.6 per cent at the same time last year.

In addition, the total Unemployment Insurance Commission payout had declined in the Victoria area, he said.

In June the local UIC office paid out $3 million to 2,269 people, down from $3.5 million to 2,507 people in May.

With improving economic conditions, Victorians must work 12 weeks before they qualify for unemployment insurance, up from 11 weeks in spring.

The length of time needed to qualify changes with the unemployment level. In St. John's, Nfld., claimants need work only 10 weeks in order to qualify while in Alberta, where unemployment is almost nil, they must have worked for 14 weeks.

Maximum weekly payment is $160 per week, up from $147 last year.

The waiting period before the first cheque two weeks if laid off or eight weeks if employed quits.

Yearwood said those claiming UIC benefits after being laid off should expect to wait almost four weeks before receiving their first cheque.

He said the centre must wait two weeks after the claim is made and then it begins processing the file, sending the claimant an eligibility card. By the time it is returned and the cheque paid it is into the fourth week. This is part of regular procedure, but comes as a surprise to many people claiming for the first time, he said.

Claimants in Victoria can get one week of benefits for each of 25 weeks worked. In addition, they can get one week for every two weeks worked between 26 and 52, or 13 additional weeks of benefits.

Victoria also qualifies for about 12 weeks of further benefits, based on its current unemployment level, for a total of about 50 weeks. No one can claim more than one year of benefits in any area in Canada.

During the past three months, the number of people registered as looking for work at the Canada Employment Centre has ranged from 8,900 to 8,000. This is down 1,000 from the same months in 1977.

During the past 90 days, 207 people were given mobility grants to seek work in other communities. These are mainly northern Vancouver Island, northern British Columbia, Edmonton and Calgary.

There is no onus on the building inspector to ask if the homes are AHOP financed, he added. "That wouldn't be his prerogative."

Butler said council is concerned about the problem of cheap housing in areas where quality homes are already in place and for that reason has referred the matter to the Advisory Planning Commission for study.

"We recognize an alteration in the economic conditions is forcing changes in the type of homes being built today," he said.

Council Warning

The owner of a Saanich home that has remained in a derelict condition since being damaged in a $20,000 fire in October, 1977, will be warned that the municipality intends to demolish the building and bill him for the cost. But council agreed Monday night that Balbir Ghag, the owner of the home at 371 Ker, should have an opportunity to be heard before Saanich proceeds with demolition.

If several major obstacles are cleared between now and November and a number of other "assumptions" are realized, Saanich will have an industrial reserve estimated to earn the municipality a profit of more than $3 million over the next six years.

He stressed that while an impact study is being prepared over the summer and fall, Saanich has committed money "up front" but has secured options. The total purchase price is close to $900,000.

In the case of the 34.8 privately owned acres on the west side of the road — in

The land is now a mixture of public and private ownership, in two tracts on the east and west sides of the road. It totals 141 acres but only a maximum of 82 will be usable and Couveller said the cash flow projections are based on the sale of 72 acres.

The intention is to develop the varied terrain of this site into benches suitable for storing the heavy industrial equipment which is now scattered across Saanich in several locations, including the Blenkinsop Valley.

For the 106 acres of Crown land on the east side of Interurban — of which about 60 will be usable for light industry — Saanich will pay the B.C. Development Corporation a negotiated $300,000, after rezoning has been completed.

Housing Halt Ordered

Central Saanich council has imposed a 60-day moratorium on new house construction on small lots in the Brentwood area.

The action was taken Monday night after about 100 residents appeared before council to protest an 11-unit low cost housing development being built on Slugget.

The residents, led by Gordon Rose, 960 Snugget, handed over a petition signed by 228 persons objecting to the development on the grounds it would devalue properties in the area and destroy the quality and esthetic value of the community.

Mayor Jean Butler said today there is nothing council can do about the development, financed through the federal Assisted Home Ownership Plan (AHOP).

Under the plan the builder must sell the houses for $45,000 or less.

She said no one on council was aware the subdivision plan included low-cost housing until the matter came up Monday night.

"Really, it's none of our business where a person gets his financing."

The subdivision plan, originally submitted by Larry Flannigan, conformed to the bylaws by providing 60-foot frontage for each lot, she said.

She said the building plans, tendered by contractor Tod Hackett, who purchased the property from Flannigan, were approved by the building inspector.

There is no onus on the building inspector to ask if the homes are AHOP financed, she added. "That wouldn't be his prerogative."

Election Policy Changes Eyed

Two proposals for significant changes to Saanich election policies came before council Monday night, but both were held over until a September committee meeting to allow maximum discussion once holidays are out of the way.

Biennial Voting?

North Saanich is expected to be the third municipality in the Greater Victoria area to opt for biennial municipal elections.
